

COUNTESS OF WARWICK LAUDS GEN. FRENCH HOLY WAR ONLY AWAITS WORD OF SULTAN

SIR JOHN FRENCH'S RESOLUTE LEADER AS COUNTESS SEES HIM

Impressions of Britain's Leading Soldier Related by Countess of Warwick.

IS A GIFTED COMMANDER

Worshipped by His Men in Spite of His Merciless Insistence on Efficiency of Highest Order.

By Countess Warwick. London, Nov. 20.—In the Daily Express the Countess of Warwick gives an interesting sketch of Sir John French.

My first meeting with Field Marshal John French, commander in chief of the "contemptible little army" that is busy helping to make history, dates back to the South African war.

In the wide space that separates the home war from the great international conflict, we met very often. He was frequently our guest at Easton Lodge and sometimes at Warwick castle, and I visited him at Government House, Aldershot, I believe, many occasions of hearing his views of the world problem that confronts us now.

It was at Carlidge's hotel we met during the Boer war. My eldest son, Guy, Lord Brooke, had then arrived at the age of 17, and still at Eton, had held all his personal effects, including his fur coat and jewelry given him by family and friends, to the hilt, and he was absolutely getting to the front and equipping himself when there.

A Resolute Figure. I recall General French as I saw him at Carlidge's, firm mouthed, curt in manner, briefly incisive in speech, but no more than absolutely necessary, and looking at me with the curious glance that bespeaks the man of action who dreams and sees visions.

Many of my soldier friends were with him in South Africa, and he gifts as a valiant leader, roused enthusiasm. Writing home from the front, they told me he had but one fault as a commanding officer—he did not get on with me.

He came back to England wearing all the laurels of a successful general, and I met him several times in town. The first time I met him was in the "everywhere" was no more to John French than any other dust.

Learns to Speak French. When the entente cordiale was in the air and there was a chance that Great Britain and France would work side by side, he was delighted.

He was extremely anxious to take me on a motor tour over the scene of Napoleon's last campaign, an ambition of mine which I had long had possible of fulfillment. We came very near to going with him, but, unfortunately, something intervened.

A Born Soldier. A born soldier, a merciful to the inefficient. He brook no high officer, who was also a personal friend, because that officer made a bad blunder. Private considerations were swept

Turkey Has More Than Two Million Men Under Arms; Declares Minister of War

Enver Pasha Is Described by German Correspondent as Masterful Leader, Quite Unlike the Demon He Is Painted.

Berlin, Nov. 20.—(I. N. S.)—Dr. Emil Ludwig, the Constantinople correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt, telegraphs: "The Turkish war ministry is the strangest place in the world, an old palace built in the romantic days of the Ottoman empire, with a beautiful Italian arcade, a colossal stairway and innumerable large halls of oriental splendor.

Enver Pasha Misrepresented. "The man who is not only directing the present war of Turkey, but has made it possible by his wonderful talent for organization and energy, has risen from an obscure lieutenant to the rank of generalissimo and son-in-law of the sultan in eight short years.

London, Oct. 26.—London's night-shirt is a fearful and wonderful garment, and Count Zeppelin is responsible for this "nightly" revolution.

MOSLEMS IN READINESS

One Word From Sultan Would Prompt El Senussi to Let Loose Armed Hordes of the Faithful.

London, Nov. 20.—(I. N. S.)—"Britain and her allies will never take Constantinople. Their policy in the Balkans has been stupid and suicidal. Before they beat the Turkish empire they will be faced with over forty millions of Moslems, for a world wide Jihad, or holy war, is now in course of preparation.

This was the statement today of Mr. Kahida, a prominent Turkish merchant who has but recently left Constantinople. He ranks high among his compatriots as a Mohammedan who has made a pilgrimage to Mecca. He declares that the peril of a great holy war is imminent.

"The preparations for a Jihad," said Mr. Kahida, "have been going on since 1911, when Italy attacked Turkey. So far as Turkey is concerned in the present war she has little money to continue, but she is receiving support, and the nation itself is rich, and the people are intensely patriotic.

Turkish Army Efficient. "The army is a perfect fighting machine as the British and French now in Gallipoli have admitted. The rulers of the Ottoman empire recognize that this is likely to be a fight to the death, and in the last resort, should there be a sign that Turkey is likely to be beaten they will remain to the last. That effort would be the greatest of all, and would effectively paralyze the enemies of Islam. All arrangements have been made to put this into effect, and call a holy war.

Mohammedans Are United. "The great powers have long known of the power of this veiled prophet, El Senussi. The British foreign office has been at pains to find out all about him, and is well aware that after 26 years El Senussi has welded together all the Moslems of every race. From India to Hissland and from Adia Minor to the source of the Nile every Mohammedan is united with his brothers in blind obedience to the prophet.

Divided Into Three Districts. "From the Germany military standpoint, Belgium is organized into three districts, the first, the Operationsgebiet or the zone of operations, which extends some 15 to 20 miles behind the actual line of fighting; the second, the Etappen, which is an intermediary zone where all the supplies for the front are collected and distributed; and the third, the Occupationsgebiet or the occupied territory organized with both military and civil governments. No person can go from one to the other except on special permission, and then only by train, which includes as one of its comforts a thorough searching.

Flight to Holland Frequent. "Naturally no Belgian can go to Holland except by stealth, and I have good reason to believe that some 60,000 have passed the frontier since the first of the year. Sometimes this necessitates the killing of one or two sentinels.

Swiss Newspapers Placed Under Ban. Bern, Nov. 20.—Censorship in France is becoming even more strict. All Swiss newspapers, which are not supporting the cause, are now placed under ban. The publishers are destroyed by the authorities as soon as they cross the frontier.

TIDINGS ARE CARRIED

Common Practice Is for Aviators to Spread News of Other Airmen Who Have Fallen.

By William Philip Simms. Paris, Nov. 4.—(By Mail.)—Between French, German and British airmen exists a strange comradeship, a fraternity of chivalry and dramatic courtesies which stems not from the mutual slaying and butchery of war like a diamond on black velvet.

While French, British, Belgians, Germans and Austrians on the ground are killing each other by the thousands, the airmen of the allies and the birdmen from the central empires are putting each other to death, high in the sky, with the utmost courtesy.

Psychologists ask if the warfare in the sky isn't developing the superhero to whom killing is a sport and death a defeat, like arriving second in a hundred-mile race.

Enemy Pays Homage. Every time a French aviator has met death in enemy's territory, Belgian aviators carried to France, news of the event. After Poupard died in a mid-air duel a wreath and a card fell from a Taube soaring two miles above the French lines.

When a German warplane is sent crashing to earth in one of these wonderful air duels, flowers for the German aviators invariably are dropped by the French fighters whenever the duel has been fairly fought.

It is because the men of the air are heroes of a superior sort. Such, at least, is one opinion. For, it is pointed out, most anybody can face bullets on the ground when hundreds of thousands of others are plunging them out of the sky, a bullet attached to give it weight.

The British do the same for the Germans. It has become a sort of unwritten law after Poupard died in a mid-air duel a wreath and a card fell from a Taube soaring two miles above the French lines.

When such a brave man meets and brings down another of his own particular kind, he seems to feel no personal animosity toward his opponent, but merely a keen rivalry, plus, perhaps, a certain amount of admiration, depending upon the other's skill and courage and qualities as a "clean" fighter.

When it is over the irrepressible desire to let the vanquished hero's friends know he died like a man seems to come over the victor.
