

No photograph taken since the heavy slides in the Panama canal in September better illustrate the enormity of the task confronting the United States engineers than this panorama received yesterday by The Journal from W. R. Grace & Co., of San Francisco. The Cascadas, a 15-yard dipper dredger, shown in the foreground on the left hand side, dug 78,090 yards of material from the cut during the week ending November 16. She is the largest one of the diggers employed. The combined fleet of eight dredgers dug 289,400 cubic yards during that week 239,885, and 254,286 and 256,262 cubic yards during the three weeks previous. The record for a day's work so far on the cut was 44,495 cubic yards dug on Sunday, November 44. The government expects to have the canal ready for service again by spring.

West-bound traffic will be maintained as often as possible, but the en-tire fleet of the line will be needed to handle the products of the Honolulu painting. sugar refineries. The 25 8000 to 12.000 Notices ton steamers of the line will all be in this service.

Previous to this announcement W. R. Grace & Co., the Luckenback Steamship company and the Panama-Pacific Steamship company had withdrawn, sending their steamer into offshore or west coast lanes of trade.

Sugar Pills Steamers.

The time necessary for the run around the continent of South America is too great say steamship men to allow a profit to the operators. Demands of the sugar refineries, the nitrate producers and wheat exporters have been too lucrative for the operators of the great lines to pass up.

According to Mr. Kennedy, the new steamers Arborean and Artisan, specially built to handle lumber from north Pacific ports to the Atlantic will be sent to Europe with bulky cargoes from the Atlantic seaboard as soon as they are ready for service. The Arborean is expected from the Maryland Shipbuilding yards shortly after January 1, and the Artisan within 45 days after.
