

GRIPPING FILM PLAY
TAKEN FROM STORY OF CANADIAN WOODS

Frank Campeau Is Outstanding Figure in Drama at Columbia; Piece Thrills.

Frank Campeau, who played Trampas in "The Virginian," and, if memory serves rightly, the Mexican in the original production of "Arizona," is the outstanding figure in an absorbing photoplay, "Jordan Is a Hard Road," at the Columbia.

"Jordan Is a Hard Road" is taken from Sir Gilbert Parker's story of the Canadian woods and is a drama with a skillful occasional blending of scriptural allegory—a fleeting glimpse of the hard road to Jordan.

Co-stars with Campeau are the inevitable Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore. Campeau is seen as a bad man with a heart who reforms for the sake of his daughter, keeping from her his bandit past.

Jailed for his misdeeds the highwayman gives his infant girl (Dorothy Gish) to a friend with an admonition never to reveal the true character of her father.

New later, drawn by father love, he comes back and impelled by the fervor of a religious meeting at which the girl plays and sings, resolves to live a better life. He is, however, one, but he manages to still keeping the girl in ignorance of her parentage.

The girl falls in love with a young Englishman who needs $5,000 to secure an option on a valuable mine. The reformed father promises the money, but his old men rob the local bank. For the sake of the girl and her lover Campeau turns robber again. He recovers the money, but receives a mortal wound in performing the job.

He crawls home and cleverly gains an accidental shooting in his office, deceiving the girl and the Englishman into thinking he has been shot in cleaning a revolver. He dies happy without revealing his true identity to his daughter.

A Keystone comedy featuring Fatty Arbuckle playing horse with a galaxy of Broadway stars, which includes Willie Collier, Sam Bernard and Weber & Fields, is shown as a laugh provoker.

Theda Bara Stars
In Majestic's Film

Emotional Actress Chief Attraction in Stirring Drama, in Which Strife Between Capital and Labor Is Depicted.

Theda Bara in a stirring drama, "The Destruction," is the attraction which the Majestic theatre is offering this week. It is a story of the battle of labor and capital, augmented by intrigue and moral depravity. In which the struggle of the better element is the only redeeming feature.

The story is laid in a mining town. Miss Bara, as Ferdinand, succeeds in making the wife of the mine, but develops an enemy in her husband's grown son, who, while at college, had occasion to know what she was.

The elder man develops heart trouble. His wife already has started an intrigue with the manager of the mill, expecting to so combat her husband's son that he will be left penniless. To hasten the father's death, a strike is called.

The elevating influence in the plot is furnished by the son, who, despite the efforts of the plotting woman, succeeds in ending the strike, but is compromised by his stepmother and temporarily displaced from his father's good graces. The plotters celebrate victory too soon, however, and are caught. Those in the intrigue perish in a fire in the house in which they are celebrating.

A Mutual illustrated weekly and music by a stringed orchestra, recently added to the attractions, complete the bill.

Naval Militia to Be Inspected Tonight

Inspection Will Take Place on Board the Cruiser Boston; Christmas Tree and Dance Planned.

The Oregon Naval Militia will be given inspection tonight on the cruiser Boston by Lieutenant J. H. Blackburn, representing the United States navy, and Adjutant General George A. White, of the Oregon National Guard. There will be a Christmas tree and dance. Some of the fruits of the evergreen tree will be the medals and trophies, with General White acting as Santa Claus.

There will be 14 medals for the men of the winning gun crew in the contests last summer and a trophy cup given to division scoring the highest. Four prizes will be given the dancers. The two prizes for the ladies are an electric flatiron and a coffee percolator. It is hoped that 100 men will be in line for inspection at 8 o'clock. Lieutenant Commander Blair extends an invitation to members of the O. N. M., their families and friends.
