

What Society is Doing

BY NONA LAWLER

HONORING Miss Margaret Ayer, popular debutante, Mrs. Gay Lombard entertained at luncheon this afternoon at the University club. A very pretty girl of the younger set circled the table, which was a veritable herald of spring with its masses of freesia, narcissus, violets, lilacs and the very prettiest of flowers. They included, Miss Ayer, Miss Nancy Zan, Miss Ruth Teal, Miss Margaret Mears, Miss Virginia McDonough, Miss Genevieve Brooks, Miss Innes Bodwell of Victoria, B. C.; Miss Marian Smith, Miss Helen Ladd, Miss Ruth Marvin, Miss Allas MacMaster, Miss Antoinette Mears, Miss Elizabeth Jacob, Miss Blumauer Litt, and Mrs. N. E. Ayer.

At Reed College.
For originally the women of Reed college can hold their own against all comers. A short time ago they gave a party for women only, to demonstrate their independence of the men. Last Saturday afternoon they gave a party for the men to demonstrate the fact that man can now assume the place traditionally given to woman. They planned out the party, each lady signed up for a man, each lady filled her man's program, in fact the usual order was completely reversed except in dancing where the men lead. The party was very successful, especially in getting the largest crowd out that ever attended a purely student and faculty function. The affair was held in the assembly hall of the college, which was decorated with holly and the adjoining corridors were cozily arranged with rugs, cushions, and easy chairs for those who did not dance. The programs were all hand-made, and carried out the simple but neat design of decorations.

Besides dancing, a number of stunts were given for entertainment. The first of these was a pab ballad, entitled, "Gentle Alice Brown," which was given with a moving picture play the shadows of the actors being seen on the screen. After a few more dances Miss Adele Brault entertained the party with two French songs which were well received. They were, "J'ai Pleure en Reve," and Gounod's "Chantez, Riez, et Dormez." The third number was a solo dance by Miss Mary Brownlie, who was accompanied in her encore with a song by Miss Adele Brault. The fourth stunt was an illustration of "The Evolution of the Butterfly," which was repeated from the woman's party. It was planned by Miss Elizabeth Madsen and kept the audience laughing from start to finish. Miss Marie Cohen gave a series of aesthetic dances which were very attractive. The final number was given as the end of the party, and was a charge on the word "Adios."

The committee responsible for the success of the party was composed of Miss Hanita Friedenthal, Miss Mary Brownlie, Miss Hazel Kurtz, Miss Margaret Walton, Miss Adele Brault, Miss Helen Phillips, and Miss Maurine Laber. Dr. Max F. Cushing and Miss Louise Huntley assisted in the planning and Miss Maida Rossiter and Miss Josephine Hammond served the ice cream.

Scenes Depicted Are Intensely Dramatic
"Madame X" Presented at the Majestic Theatre; Role of Leading Figure Created by Miss Donnelly.
Dorothy Donnelly, supported by a good company of film stars, presented "Madame X" at the Majestic yesterday. The film was delayed en route to Portland and did not appear on the Majestic screen at the first performance Sunday, as scheduled. The role of Madame X was created for Miss Donnelly.
The play is full of tense dramatic incidents. It is the story of a French woman who deserted her husband and child to become the companion of a former lover. She declines in the social and moral ladder until she reaches the bottom. Friends conspire to get a legacy for Madame X—money she left to the deserted son—and in trying to force her to accept this wealth they threaten to expose her to the husband. She kills one of the conspirators, and in the trial for murder is defended by the son she deserted. The young attorney does not recognize the client as his mother.
