Deep drifts, a continuance of the stinging cold and herry calls for the lumber featured today's aspect of the storm which began Tuesday night and continued until late last night.

In the residence districts, some venturesome and courageous householders undertook to tackle the great drifts that lay upon walks and lawns, but for the most part the task looked so formidable that the residents left it

Having slept well and enjoyed a hot breakfast, he was in a mord to say that the indicaions are that the storm is gradually dissipating. The insidious "low," that is blamed for all Portland's grief, appears to be filling up. With a minimum temperature 2 degrees higher than yeaterday's minimume with an abatement of the east wind, with high pressure reported to the north, he opines that the dustardly low is rheaking out to sea, as if ashamed of the black eye it has given the fair fame of the northwest. Not knowing what is going on in a weather way out in the Pacific, the forecaster wouldn't say whether the low-lived low is going to stay out there where it will cease to bother landsmen or whether it will encounter ts natural enemy, a "high," which might drive it ashore again.

Relief May Come Soon. the latter contingency comes about, the plumber and the fuel merchant will get into us sgain. But if the wind gets around to the north, driving away the clouds and giving the sun a chance, the weather ought to re-
