Klondike Play Is On At National Theatre

"The Deathlock," stirring story of a Struggle for a Lost Mine, Filmed on Dawson Trail.

Stirring days in the Klondike are presented in "The Deathlock," a Mutual photoplay which opened yesterday at the National theatre for the balance of the week.

"The Deathlock" takes its name from the Indian death caused by twisting the legs of the victim around a pole and then forcing his body to the ground. He finds it impossible to rise and so is truly locked to death.

This is the means employed in the film to do away with the hero of the tale; but, being a real melodrama, the girl in the case gets there just in time to rescue him.

Actually filmed in the snows of the Dawson trail in Alaska the scenes of "The Deathlock" make the story stand out more clearly than is ordinarily the case.

It has to do with a struggle for a lost mine, up hill and down dale, over sea and land, in mining camp, gambling den and across the eternal snows.

John Johnson, thrice winner of the Alaskan sweepstakes, is shown with his team of huskies. Frederick J. Butler and Willma Wilkie play opposite one another in the leading roles.

FRATERNAL NOTES

Oregon A. O. U. W. Declared to Be in Excellent Condition.

Oregon A. O. U. W. Flourishing.

The A. O. U. W. of California is having some hard sledding just now, but the A. O. U. W. of Oregon is an entirely separate organization based on a financial schedule of its own. Harvey Wells, state insurance commissioner, points this out and says:

"The A. O. U. W. of Oregon, on January 1 of this year, had 2666 members with $2,917,000 of insurance in force. During the last year they collected in dues and from other sources $172,305 and paid death claims amounting to $102,000.

"The members should not listen to those who are trying to discredit the organization, for since they divorced themselves from the jurisdiction of the grand lodge they have accumulated assets to the amount of $274,000. This consists largely of investments in this state, and they are all negotiable. In addition to this, they had, at the close of the year $20,000 cash on hand. They are in strong financial condition and the rates charged are adequate."

Headquarters of the grand lodge of Oregon are maintained in this city in the Oregonian building.

Birds Dying, Cattle Suffering in Storm

Nehalem, Or., Jan. 14.—The worst storm in 30 years is causing considerable suffering among cattle in the Nehalem valley. Birds are dying by hundreds. About five inches of snow has fallen so far and indications are for more. The thermometer has been below freezing for two days and registered 22 above yesterday and today.

Trains into Tillamook county are snowbound. It is reported that there is seven feet of snow at Timber and in the mountains. Yesterday's train out of Portland was snowbound in the mountains and nothing was heard from it until today.

Beauty Chat BY Lillian Russell

Copyright, 1916, by Lillian Russell.

THE manicuring of the fingernails may seem like a small and unimportant matter, but it isn't. The apparent size and shape of the finger, even the whole hand, depend upon the results of this commonplace operation. The hand, being a conspicuous member, has much to do with a person's general appearance. It is worthy of cultivation and development whether it be of the feminine or masculine gender. We naturally look for more beauty in a woman's hand than a man's. Often when we fail to find it, we can attribute its absence to negligence or ignorance.

If you are not aware of the importance of manicuring it will pay you to experiment. Say, for instance, you clip the nails very round and even with the quick. You will notice that after such trimming the nails give the fingers a stubby appearance. Closely clipped nails minimize the apparent length of the fingers. Furthermore, they have the same effect upon the hand. The more pointed you leave the nails the longer the fingers will seem, and likewise the operation will have a similar effect upon the whole hand.

Such experiments are interesting studies in line values. It is surprising what a difference can be made in the appearance of the fingers and hands merely through changing the lines of the nails.

The long slender hand is the most admired. To have fingers that taper is a feminine ambition that is general. Women are inclined to point their nails, since in this shape they apparently elongate both the fingers and the hand.

A pretty hand is greatly to be desired. Society women are especially well aware of this fact, for their hands are frequently brought into conspicuous position. As beautifiers pretty nails, fingers and hands have higher values by far than rings. Indeed, ugly hands filled with rings frequently emphasize the ugliness and even detract from the appearance of the rings.

There is very little beauty in the fat, chubby hand, but care will add to its appearance. The nails should be pointed to offset as far as possible the absence of proper length. Persistent efforts should be made to prevent the cuticle from reducing the size of the nail. The skin ought to be kept in the best possible condition and the flesh should be frequently massaged to reduce the size by eliminating the deposits of fat beneath the skin. It is surprising what a remarkable change can be made in the appearance of the short, chubby hand by giving it a little attention.

The long, slender hand with tapering fingers may demand less attention that the shorter one, but its beauty can be fully brought out only by care of the nails and skin. The woman endowed with such natural beauty is fortunate, but she should show her appreciation of the blessing bestowed by keeping her hands beautiful.

Hands are useful as well as ornamental members, but women are wise if they protect them while working or playing. Every little attention bestowed upon the hands, fingers or nails will fully repay you. Do not neglect your hands. Massage them and keep the skin white and clear. Also massage your fingers with strokes toward and around the nails. Keep your nails in becoming shape, with the cuticle well back and a touch of artificial color if the toning seems necessary.

Buckwheat Cakes

Raised without Yeast

When they are just right, the old fashioned yeast-raised buckwheat cakes are just fine. But it takes a skillful hand to get them "just right" and many housewives do not want to be bothered with a bowl of batter standing around all the time. Made after this recipe, buckwheat cakes are as good as any you ever ate and much superior to those made with self-raising flour.

Made with K C double raise baking powder, the last of the batter will make just as light cakes as the first.

K C Buckwheat Cakes

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

1 cup buckwheat flour; 1 tablespoonful sugar; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1¼ cups cold water; ½ teaspoonful salt.

Sift together, three times, the flour, sugar, salt and baking powder; stir the water in all at once and bake on a hot, well oiled griddle. Buckwheat flour calls for a generous measure of baking powder. Part milk may be used to mix the cakes but water gives quite as good results.

A delicious "spread" for griddle cakes is made by creaming together about twice as much honey (either comb or strained) as butter. Work it up with a fork to about the consistency of hard sauce.

Readers of this paper may obtain "The Cook's Book" containing this and 89 other delicious recipes free by sending the colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago. Send for "The Cook's Book" today.
