five other members of the executive committee. This executive committee was to appoint the secretary.

Johns Ignores Joseph. While George W. Joseph made the motion for the appointment of a committee of five to prepare a constitution, Chairman Jones ignored him when he named the committee. Instead of following parliamentary practice by naming Joseph first on the committee, Mr. Johns named Idleman and designated him as chairman But he appointed on the committee George A. Brown and H. Daniels, two of the progressive element. These two objected to the appointive power being vested in the president and forced a change, making all the positions elective by a majority vote.
