(Copyright, 1916, by the New York Evening Post.)

New York, Feb. 5.—(U. P.)—Something of the perplexity with which everyone was impressed at conflicting statements from Berlin and Washington regarding the latest German pressed at conflicting statements from Berlin and Weshington regarding the latest German attitude toward America, was reflected in the stock market today. The renewed decline during the early traffing expressed one view; the sharp recovery after a half hour of weakness expressed the other, while the uncertain movement afterward suggested the inability of the market to discover what the position actually was. and Philadelphia Trade actually was.
