Fine Show Is Given By Aggie Engineers

Miniature Mining Camps, Electrical Work, Material Testing, Machinery and Other Interesting Exhibits.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Or., Feb. 16.—Over 1500 people attended the opening of the big engineering show at the Oregon Agricultural college Monday night. The exhibits and decorations far surpassed any former show put on by the engineering students at the college, and the actual testing of various materials by large commercial testing machines was a new feature that attracted the attention of many. All of the schools of engineering in the college were represented by large and interesting exhibits.

The mining engineers, with their picturesque mining camp in the boom days of 20 years ago, and their miniature barroom, where Faro games, poker and tantan held full sway, had one of the most unique displays of the entire show. The electrical engineers displayed some high tension and Tesla coil work at 10 o'clock in the electrical laboratory. Sparks flew when the big 350,000 volt transformer was operated. The breaking of 8x12 fir beams in the material laboratory and the tension and torsion tests of steel and iron were the main features of the mechanical engineers' exhibit. Logging machinery and apparatus and models of forest service camps and fire-fighting apparatus were on display in the forestry and logging engineering department. Model reclamation projects, a section of the Columbia river highway, a model of the Arrowrock dam with auxiliary water system, and a railroad construction exhibit, featured the civil engineers' department. The wood-working shops, blacksmith shops, plumbing shops, power plant, machine shops and foundry were operated throughout the evening by the students.

Chinese Deserter Ordered Deported

When Fung Quong Yin slipped over the side of the steamer Lyra away back in August, 1907, and hid among the pilings of the Portland Lumber company's dock until the craft had put to sea, he figured on making America his permanent abode. But Fate and Chinese Inspector Raphael P. Bonham differed with his view. United States Commissioner F. H. Drake has ordered Fung sent back to China. The Chinese was a member of the steward's crew of the Lyra. Fung's desertion cost the United States of Greece $500 under the bond required when Chinese sailors are allowed to enter American ports.

Drouth Scare Gave Sheridan a Fright

Water Supply Main Broken in Several Places by Landslides and Settlement of Soil—Reservoir About Empty.

Sheridan, Or., Feb. 16.—Sheridan was threatened with water famine yesterday, when discovery was made that landslides in two places and the settling of the soil in others had disconnected the pipe of the water main through which the city's supply of water is obtained, some nine miles distant in the mountains. The reservoir was nearly empty, and the water from the spring was washing away the hill where the first break occurred. Workmen were at once put on the job of repairing the damage, and the reservoir is now filling up.

A Little Care and A Little Cuticura

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are brighter to-day than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feelings make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a concentrated food-tonic, free from alcohol to improve the blood, benefit the lungs and strengthen the system. Your druggist has it—always refuse substitutes.

Beauty Chat

BY Lillian Russell

(Copyright, 1916, by Lillian Russell.)

IT MAY sound rather peculiar when it is stated that the air is always hungry, but it is. Possibly it would be more proper to say the air is always thirsty, for it persistently absorbs moisture when absorption is possible. This characteristic of the air we breathe is responsible for many colds and serious diseases of the air passages. It also ruins many complexions.

Ventilation is a subject that is of primary importance. So is breathing. The latter until recently was studied at the expense of the first named. People took the greatest precautions to make their homes comfortable and ignored ventilation. Fortunately, we have acquired new views of these subjects and know that one is just as important as the other.

If all women realized to what extent their health can be impaired by dry and vitiated air, the average home would certainly be better ventilated. This subject, however, appeals to their pride as well as to their intelligence.

Lack of ventilation in the home is bound to have a detrimental effect upon the skins and complexions of all who dwell there. Dry and impure air has a direct effect upon the skin which is difficult to offset by the application of lotions and creams. You will quickly develop an ugly complexion if the rooms where you spend your time are not well ventilated.

The air is always appealing for moisture. The dryer it becomes the stronger it makes this appeal. In a room that is filled with dry air the atmosphere is continually pulling moisture from the bodies of all and any who may be there. It draws on the skin and membranes and irritates both—sometimes like a mustard plaster, although with less apparent effect. The result is dry and ugly skin and such irritated membranous linings of the air passages that colds and diseases are courted.

In a recent article on this subject a prominent physician says: "Heating and ventilation must go hand in hand. In the winter time most of our homes are overheated with abnormally dry air. Dry air is hungry for moisture, and the warmer it gets the hungrier it becomes. It takes its ventilation from the skin and the mucous membranes, causing irritation and predisposition to colds and catarrhal conditions of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. It causes excessive evaporation from the skin, which gives rise to a feeling of chilliness. It is for this reason that warm, dry air does not give the same sense of comfort as does the cooler and moist air."

"Do not keep your home too warm. A temperature of 68 degrees is quite enough, and 65 degrees is even better when you become accustomed to it. But if you have been accustomed to dwelling in an overly warm house you had better make the change gradually.

You properly ventilate your home and keep the right amount of moisture in the air, you have an excellent chance to enjoy good health. But if, while in your home, you breathe only dry, vitiated, warm air, you are sure to ruin your complexion as well as your health. The complexion is dependent upon the condition of the health. So, when breathing warm, dry and impure air, you are jeopardizing your complexion in two ways."
