BRINGING UP FATHER

WILLARD NOT TO BEGIN TRAINING TILL COLD ENDS

Chicago, Feb. 16.—(U. P.)—Jess Willard will not take any chances with his heavyweight laurels until he is sure of feeling in first-class shape. He has decided that he will not fight Frank Moran in New York until late in March, and will not begin training until the severe cold from which he is suffering is entirely cured.

Champion Sits Back and Lets Promoters Do All the Worrying.

This is what the heavyweight champion told his manager, Tom Jones, today when Jones arrived here from New York. The title-holder takes the position that it will be impossible for him to begin even the lightest sort of training until next week and possibly not until the week after. Meantime Jess is taking it easy in his home at Rogers Park, and is letting the promoters of his proposed battle with Moran do the worrying.

Chicago Charges Bad Faith.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—(I. N. S.)—Chicago fight fans say Jess Willard is sparring for time. He removed the title, realizing the importance of the Moran bout, is anxious to get in better condition than would be possible if the match was staged as scheduled.
