

News of Women's Clubs BY VELLA WINNER

THREE hundred women shared the hospitality of the Portland Psychology club yesterday afternoon on the cozy, comfortable and literary tea given in Meier & Frank's tea room. Mrs. Alva Stephens, the president of the club, presided with grace and gracefulness, welcoming the guests and introducing the artists. The feature of the afternoon was the dramatic interpretation of "The Witching Hour," by Miss Elizabeth Eugenia Woodbury. Preceding her reading Dr. E. W. De Busk of the state university gave an interesting and thought-provoking address on the psychological phases of the play. Miss Woodbury is an inspiration. Naturalness is the great essential in her art, yet each character in the great drama stood out in bold relief by force of its personality through her, gripping the hearts and minds of the audience from first to last. The rich contralto voice of Miss Dagmar Ines Kelly was heard to advantage in "Musica Proibita" (Gastaldon), "Correspondence" (Coombs), "The Gondolier" (Coombs). Miss Agnes Senn was at the piano. Miss Genevieve Gilbert, who possesses a beautiful contralto voice, sang "Madame Butterfly" (Puccini), "Il Bacio" (Arditti), "Nothing But Love" (Bond), with Carl Nuttson, pianist. Miss Agnes Senn, an accompanist, Miss Vella Winner spoke informally on the psychology of the press. Each of those taking part in the program received beautiful flowers. Refreshments were served from a long table made springlike in golden jonquills, and presided over by Mrs. J. Coulson Hare, Mrs. R. Walkins, Mrs. Charles A. Steele and Mrs. Thomas G. Greene.

At the business meeting there was much interest shown in the school garden, Creston has already begun work on its garden which promises to be larger and finer than ever before. The attendance was large. Tea was served. Mrs. Belle V. Ober presided.

MEN, NOT WOMEN, FOOLISH LUNCHERS.

Whenever a man wants to make the crowning example of feminine foolishness he always prates about the pie and ice cream, chocolate soda and dill pickle luncheons that the average business girl makes her noonday meal of.

I was sitting in a popular downtown luncheon room the other day and made a few interesting observations along this line. The man sitting next to me, an amiable little clerk who looked as though a good puff of fresh air would blow him overboard, was eating a portion of baked beans and pork. He ate these with avidity. And then consulted the menu with a hungry eye. "Stumpkin pie," the waitress asked him curtly. "Yes," he replied mildly, wholly unconscious of the gastronomic bomb that he was about to drop. "Sweet potato pie, vanilla ice cream on the side." Enough starch to last him for a week!

If he had taken the time to glance at a trim-looking girl across the table, who was calmly consuming her lettuce and cheese sandwich and glass of milk in a manner that would have delighted the heart of one Horace Fletcher, he probably would have sneered a contemptuous sneer. Nor would he have been any more impressed with the baked apple which constituted her dessert.

It seems almost like an exaggeration to say that of the 10 girls whom I noticed while I was making way through the city, not one of them indulged in the silly food combinations that we are always credited with selecting. In fact, even those who appeared the most unlightened looking seemed either to have some actual knowledge of dietetics or to have unconsciously chosen a meal of the proper food. The men, on the contrary, "filled up" with the heavy foods. Macaroni, corn starches, pie, much pie, seemed to be their favorites. An expert dietitian told me that the average city person partakes of far too much starchy food, forgetting almost entirely that an excess of starchy food can only be properly assimilated by the persons who do actual physical labor. The value of sugar in moderation, "as an energizer," is not generally known and, consequently, usually regarded as a luxurious side-bit, in reality contains much more nourishment than many an ill-chosen meal.

A sweet potato pie, a narrow, office wreck, who hastily gulps down his cup of coffee, would be infinitely better off if he quenched his thirst with the mild and specific grape juice.

The thing to remember always, is that the best lunch does not always require the most money.

CHICKEN AND CORN MEAL CROQUETTES.

One cupful corn meal, one cupful onion juice, one egg, one cupful chopped chickpeas, salt and pepper. Mix the ingredients and drop in spoonfuls in hot fat. The corn mush to be used for both fish balls and the croquettes must be made of the southern white meal, of course. The mush may be combined with any kind of cold meat and make excellent croquettes. These are much more simple to prepare than the usual kind, in that the corn meal does not need to be dipped in egg and crumbs before frying. The meal forms a crust of itself.

Alkali in Soap Bad for the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary multiflora coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, curly and easy to manage.

You can get multiflora coconut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. (Adv.)

YOUNG GIRL'S NECK IS BROKEN WHEN HEAVY TRUCK RUNS HER DOWN

Esther Gibson Instantly Killed As She Steps in Front of Car; Driver Let Go.

Esther Gibson, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gibson of 631 Rodney avenue, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock, as she stepped into the path of a wood truck while on her way to a rehearsal of a school entertainment.

The girl started to cross Williams avenue at Fargo street, stepping from behind a pole into the street before a wood truck driven by M. Weiser, 225 Alberta street, working for the Alberta Fuel company. The machine was swerved out of its course, but the rear wheels passed over the girl, breaking her neck.

Patrolmen Arnold and Roney, who were nearby, carried the girl into the office of Dr. C. D. Boland, 513 Williams street, where she was beyond aid. They detained Weiser and took him to the office of Deputy District Attorney Welch, who released him pending an inquest.

Coroner Dammach conducted an investigation and said that from statements of witnesses he did not believe the driver to blame, since witnesses said that he shouted and tried to turn the car away from the girl. Coroner Dammach said he did not know if an inquest would be held.

Painless Parker—Outlaw

His Confessions

CHAPTER XVII.

This perfect willpower of the "ethical" Dental Trust to murder a man in cold blood in order to make it not for me opened my eyes.

It caused me to settle the question for myself once and for all. I decided to remain an "outlaw" for the rest of my professional career.

I am proud of the fact that I am "unethical." It places me apart from a class of men who have shown a hostility toward progress that is nothing short of astounding. It distinguishes me from the Medicine Men who fight educating the public because it would interfere with their entrenched graft; because it would let the daylight into their bluff methods; because it would end the time-honored fee graft; because it would put their profession on an honest basis.

A hundred years from now the dentist or doctor who employs now accepted "ethical" tactics will be driven out of the community. He will be viewed much the same as would my scholarly friend, Dr. Henry W. Rainmaker should he come to town, set up his totem-pole and wigwag and begin the manufacture of his Medicine of front of the City Hall.

I consider it a privilege to be able to address the great fair-play-loving American public through these columns and show up a class of men who, living a thousand years in the past, still struggle for the right to hoodwink the ignorant, practice the black arts, before simple professional principles, based upon an absurd claim to superiority, tax the gullible all they can stand—and fight like wildcats to keep their graft intact.

They have been trying for twenty-three years to stifle my voice—but they haven't done it yet. They can't.

THEY REFUSE TO EAT
At periods in most children's lives they fail to relish their meals and refuse even the delicacies prepared to tempt their appetites. They lack ambition, and growth seems impeded, which causes anxiety.

Do not compel them to eat, because nutrition is impaired. They need healthful exercise in fresh air and sunshine, but of equal importance is a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion three times a day to feed the tissues and furnish food-energy to improve their blood, aid nutrition and sharpen their appetites.

The medicinal food in Scott's Emulsion supplies the very elements children need to build up their strength. They relish Scott's—it is free from alcohol or drugs. Avoid substitutes.
