Receipts So Heavy That All Nearby Markets Are Glutted With

The greatest run of smelt in the Cowlitz river that the local trade has known for a number of years is now shown. Receipts from the Washington stream are very heavy, completely glutting the trade here as well as at nearby points.

While sales of smelt continue generally at 75° a box in the city, the price is weak at that for fresh offerings. Veal market is weaker and lower after a spectacular price advance along the whole-sale way. Sales along the street age reported gethered and the work of getting the boats quality, although here and there some dealer may secure as high as 12c from some small butcher for a single animal.

Stanfield section, according to Lloyd Riches, editor of the Stanfield Standars, and a former employe of The Journal. Mr. Riches was in the city today, having come forward with several loads of cattle owned by Dixon Bros. of Stanfield.
"The Stanfield section is in good shape."
says Riches. "The livestock men had plenty of feed over the cold spell with some to spare. For that reason there were only nominal loses during the winter. The fruit trees were not damaged, according to the best svailable information and the growing wheat crop is in excellent condition."

NOTICE to Shippers of Country Killed MEATS

While it is true there has been passed in this city an ordinance requiring that all meats pass inspection before the same are offered for sale, be advised that this in no wise interferes with or prevents your shipment of the same as heretofore. Certain simple requirements must be adhered to, however, and they are as follows: Liver and kidneys (not lungs and heart—remove these) must be left in the carcass of a veal or mutton. In dressing hogs remove as heretofore all organs except the kidneys. All healthy animals of suitable age and size may be marketed.
