

REVOLT IN INDIA NOT WIDESPREAD STATES JUDGE ON WAY HOME

Educated Natives Need Occupation; Time Not Ripe for More Representation.

San Francisco, March 21.—(I. N. S.)—Bringing first hand information on the revolt in India, Justice Spencer of the Madras high court, has arrived here on his way to England, making the journey three-quarters of the way around the world to avoid the perils of the Mediterranean submarines. He is accompanied by Lady Spencer and is staying at the Stewart hotel while here.

The unrest in India, declares Justice Spencer, is largely due to the number of highly educated natives for whom there exists no career and no field of enterprise or business wherein they can find an outlet for their gifts and powers.

Nevertheless, he thinks the country is not ripe for a wider representation in the government by the natives, although such a measure has been advocated by Lord Minto and is being openly urged by the loyal press of India.

Justice Spencer is related to Winston Spencer Churchill. He declares that while there has been a conspiracy in the Punjab, an uprising at Singapore, and minor outbreaks and assassinations there has been no widespread rebellion and that the native princes have all remained loyal.

Garfield Comes Out For Preparedness

Roosevelt's Secretary of the Interior Tells Collegians Volunteer System Is Worse Than Useless.

Pasadena, Cal., March 21.—(U. P.)—James R. Garfield, secretary of the interior under President Roosevelt and son of the late President Garfield, strongly advocated preparedness today. "In America, an invading force could go through the country from end to end and meet no effective opposition, except in a few places," he told an assembly at the Throop College of Technology. "The volunteer system is worse than useless. Why should one man volunteer and another stay at home? Every man should know how to take care of himself in the field and be an intelligent unit in an army."

The shooting took place in Mrs. Macy's store, when Eiling came to demand several milk bottles which Mrs. Macy declared belonged to another firm. In the fight which preceded the shooting Mrs. Macy was struck over the head with a bottle.

Her 12-year-old daughter, hearing the noise, ran upstairs for help, and a minute later Mrs. Lawson, a friend, entered the store and fired. Eiling was shot through the head and died instantly.

Books Are Gifts From Queen

Woman Was Advanced Thinker

Portland Student of Advanced Thought Honored by Late Dowager Queen.

Edward Ezekiel De Young, a Portland philosopher and student of advanced thought, has two books from Elizabeth, late dowager queen of Roumania, covering researches in the higher fields of psychology.

"Elizabeth was far in advance of her time," said Mr. De Young. "She was, for a woman occupying her position, greater than any of the reigning kings and queens. She was an advanced thought thinker and teacher. Although a queen, she was a republican, and had so stated several times in the public press. She held communion with the angels, and reckoned that as her proudest attainment."

"In 1912 she sent me a letter, inclosing her photograph, in acknowledgment of the wonderful photograph of an angel, constructed of the flowing water of a waterfall in Paradise park, near Mt. Rainier, which was taken with an ordinary kodak, and said:

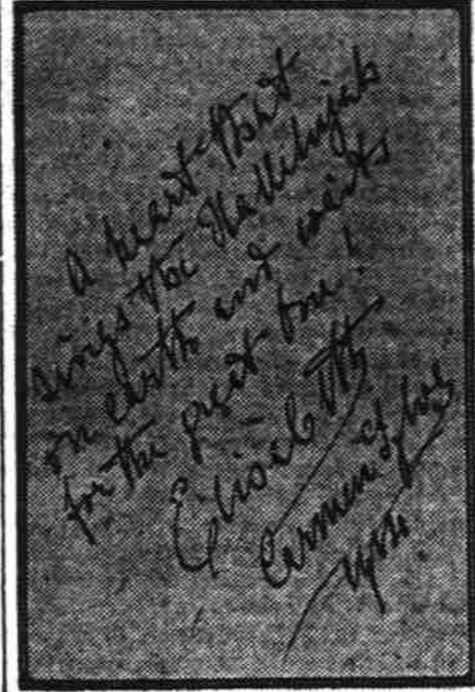

"Kind thanks for the touching thought of sending me the lovely 'Maiden of the Falls.' Angels wings may encompass the earth, and their messages reach far."

"In 1914 she sent me one of her works (320 pages, in the French language), entitled, 'Allunde,' containing key-thoughts that she had received inspirationally from the angels at various times. On the fly-leaf she had written for this 'Book of the Angels' from above. Elizabeth, 1914."

Book Is Prized. "On another occasion, in 1914, she sent me a copy of a work by her lifelong friend, Hilda, Baroness Deichman, a granddaughter of Baron Bunsen, the author of 'God in History,' and a daughter of Ernest de Bunsen. In the preface to this book the baroness says of its contents: They were given through me in automatic writing by Raphael, a Messenger of God, the messages becoming deeper as the work proceeded. The time has now come for this 'Book of the Angels' to be known in wider circles, and I trust that, by the power of God, the simple words may bring comfort to many."

The book is in English. On the fly-leaf the queen wrote this: "A heart that sings the Hallelujahs on earth and waits for the Great One! 'Elizabeth, Carmen Sylva.' Great Influence Exerted."

"Queen Elizabeth believed that this world war was but preliminary to the advent of a whole-world Messiah. She has taken part, on the 27th of each month, for the past 80 years, in each-world soul communion, the universal prayer advocated by the 'World's Advanced Thought' eventually to bring about universal peace. A lady-in-waiting always knelt at her side during the observance of the sacred hour. "It was through her great influence that Roumania was kept in peace as she was unalterably opposed to war."

Mr. Stevenson suggested a plan of devoting government lands to the settlement of colonies of men who are unemployed. Mr. Rosenthal said that peace should be brought about by a program of preparedness for peace and not by a program of preparedness for war. Mr. Kroner suggested that military preparedness could be secured through enlisting men and employing them on public works with military training as a part of their duties.

Spring Officially Arrived Last Night

Time for Young Man's Fancy to Turn to Thoughts of Love Is Here, Says Almanac.

Spring officially arrived in Portland at 8:39 o'clock last night. And now tincture of iron, sarsaparilla, sulphur and molasses and sassafras tea are in order for that lovelorn youth whose thoughts are beginning to turn to foolish things.

That's an old whimsy about the young man whose fancies turn to thoughts of love with the arrival of spring.

Spring is just like the tax statement, the water bill and the boat's grouch. They all come promptly on time.

VALUED AT $300,000

Rancher at Montezuma, Sonora, Arrives at El Paso and Tells of Villa Raiders.

El Paso, March 21.—(I. N. S.)—At least a quarter of million dollars' worth of property and 6000 head of cattle valued at about $50,000 were abandoned at Montezuma, Sonora, by R. L. Slaughter when he fled from there last week to escape possible death at the hands of Mexican bandits. Mr. Slaughter arrived in El Paso Monday with his son. He said:

"Montezuma and the neighboring country is practically all Villa territory. The inhabitants there look on Villa as their liberator—their hero. I confidently believe they would do anything at his bidding. "So far the Villistas have done nothing but raid and loot. "We are the only Americans within miles of Montezuma and as the results began to grow more frequent we thought it was a pretty good time to move, and we did."

Japs Denied Landing In Lower California

San Francisco, March 21.—(P. N. S.)—Fifty Japanese laborers held from landing at Ensenada, Lower California, at the point of the bayonet by the Mexican governor, arrived here today in the steamer of the steamer George W. Elder of the South Sea Navigation company, and were taken to the Angel Island immigration detention camp by the United States government.

A sharp exchange of notes between the Japanese and the Mexican governments is expected to follow. The case of the rejected immigrants was immediately taken up by the acting Japanese consul here with his government at Tokio. The Japanese boarded the steamer at Salinas Cruz, Mexico, buying passage to Ensenada, where a large Japanese colony has settled for colonization purposes.

When the George W. Elder reached Ensenada and lowered its gangplank soldiers stopped the Japanese and ordered them to remain aboard the steamer.

What Italy Has Done in the War

The more spectacular operations of some of the other Allies have partly obscured Italy's part in the present war in the eyes of the American public. Italy's anomalous position in being at war with Austria and at peace with Germany has, besides, produced distrust in some of the allied capitals, and the warmth of feeling evoked by Italy's siding with the Entente has given way to a chilled current of doubt and suspicion. Many are asking the question, "Why has Italy not declared war on Germany?" or "Why has she not joined France and England in their expeditions in the Near East?"

In THE LITERARY DIGEST for March 18th there is a very illuminating article consisting of excerpts from the British press and translations from French and Italian papers which bring out in a strong light the very important part that Italy has played and is playing in the war.

Other leading articles that will make this number of "The Digest" of great interest are:

Both sides are allowed to offer their cases for approval and Digest readers can judge for themselves without prejudice and with an accurate understanding of every view-point.
