Finicky Patients Are in Serious Fix

CHRONIC DYSPEPTICS AND OTHER SUFFERERS CANNOT GET FAVORITE RED, YELLOW OR GREEN ELIXIR.

LONDON, March 25.—(U. P.)—British family doctors are in a quandary. The finicky chronic patient who has been accustomed to taking a red, saffron or green elixir isn't satisfied with the color now. Neither are the family physicians, according to the wholesale druggists, but there is no alternative. The cochineals for the red tonic that does the chronic patient so much good, while it is red, is getting scarcer and scarcer. The innocuous saffron which is secretly put into the bottle just to make the mixture yellow, is about exhausted and the chlorophyll which forms the basis for a pretty green is simply unobtainable. Meanwhile the chronic dyspeptics and other suffering chronic are getting sicker and sicker. Some have fired the family doctor, but that does no good. The Germans have the dyes and will probably keep them until after the war.

Central Powers Now Plan Trade Alliance

COMMERCE BODIES ADOPT RESOLUTION FAVORING ADOPTION OF TREATIES AND TARIFF SYSTEM FAVORING TEUTONS.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(U. P.)—Economic upheavals expected after the war have led the central powers to supplement their military and political alliance with an economic union, according to diplomatic reports received by the state department, pointing out the far reaching significance of such an alliance in its relations to American commerce.

Diplomats in Austria declare that commerce bodies in various cities of the empire have adopted resolutions favoring such an alliance and that sentiment is crystallizing for the adoption of a treaty between the Teutonic allies. The proposed alliance, it is said, will be preceded by the adoption of a uniform tariff system, to insure unity of action in negotiating commercial treaties with other nations.
