

Leave Office Worries Behind

By Irene Gardner.

When men are asked what traits they admire in a wife they may differ in naming some qualifications but there is one which every man will say he requires. It is that a wife should not take her kitchen into the parlor.

Women know so well how men desire to be met with complaints regarding the domestic machinery when they come home at night that few of them discuss household cares before the husband. And this is as it should be, for men have cares enough in the business world without being burdened with the cares of the domestic end of life.

"I can tell the moment my husband enters the door whether things have gone right at the office that day," said a woman who has long since learned that it does not come from the kitchen to take her kitchen into the dining room, to say nothing of the parlor.

That man ought to be thanked of himself. His wife has many cares. She runs the house with the assistance of one medium priced girl and there are three young children. They all live comfortably, but it takes good management for the income is not large. Now, don't you think that one has just as much right to enjoy an evening free from office cares as the man has to be free from kitchen cares?

There was a man who recently told his wife detailed accounts of a difficult day he was in at the office and added, "If things were any other way I know what I'd do," and kept on this rate until he got her all worried. The difficulty was one that had just arisen and was only a temporary trouble, as he explained in his heart of hearts. But he wanted sympathy, and so got it from his wife by appealing to her. In the morning he was gloomy and left her with a wailing like that at her head. All day long she felt depressed. The children were cross and she had to give much strength to them, meantime carrying the added burden of her husband's business. When he came home at night and she saw his radiant face, she gasped: "Oh, Will, is it all right?"

What do you mean? he asked blankly, then, remembering, added laughingly, "Oh, yes; that turned out all right. I found the letter waiting for me when I got to town this morning." And he will never know that just such instances as that are eating away the bloom from her love for him. She is one of those women, who, when one of the children are sick, will send him off to business with a smile and a kiss and tell him it's less serious than she really fears it to be, for she does not want him to carry an added worry during business hours. She does not compel him to take the family and his house to his office.

If you've got a wife like that, my masculine readers, see that you play fair with her. You are probably a kind and indulgent husband, as most of them are, but be still kinder by being as kind as you can be to you. Let her take your office home with her. Lock it all in when you turn the key in the door.

MADAME MIURA IS THE JAPANESE PRIMA DONNA

Winsome Little Lady Is Different From Any Other on Stage.

By Vella Winner.

Madame Tamaki Miura, Japanese diva with the Boston Grand Opera company, is a living, melodious testimony that Kipling was wrong when he wrote:

"O, east is east and west is west, and never the twain shall meet, in the broad daylight of God's great judgment seat."

Madame Miura gives in voice, culture and charm of fascinating act, all that is required by the beautiful, artificial, occidental art of grand opera in a role that is rooted in and in substance is of the orient.

A prima donna is, just about the last thing we look for from Japan, yet here she is—and not only that—she is the Japanese prima donna, and the definite article is designating her as the absolute correct one to use, for Madame Miura is the only one of her kind in the world.

Two tiny ladies, Madame Miura, clad in a wonderful kimono, glossy black coffee banded with jeweled, magnolia blossom, skin, cherry lips, and cheeks of fascinating act, all that is required by the beautiful, artificial, occidental art of grand opera in a role that is rooted in and in substance is of the orient.

Are you going to encourage other Japanese women to enter the operatic profession? was asked. "Yes, but I will tell them not to expect success without a very great deal of hard work," she said. "I have to learn to learn yet."

Every Girl Ought to Know Trade

By Anita Stewart.

Copyright, 1916, International News Service. My mother—my wise, far-seeing mother—began when I was a little girl to prepare me to be self-supporting. I had a very, very, very strong, high soprano voice, and it was intended in those days that I should be a singer, but chance opened the door of a moving picture studio to me. I made good, and my fate was changed.

But how I make my living is a mere detail. The main point is that my mother did not trust my future to luck, in the common way with parents with their girls, although they are careful enough to try to safeguard their boys.

My mother didn't say, "Anita is pretty; she'll be sure to marry and live happily ever afterward." She said, "Perhaps Anita may marry. Perhaps she may not marry. Perhaps, if she does marry, her husband may turn out to be a poor business man, who has no faculty for making money, or he may become an invalid, or die, and leave her with children, and she may need to work for her money a hundred times more desperately than any single woman ever does."

I've seen all of these calamities happen over and over again, and I don't want my daughter to be one of those helpless, futile women who have never made a dollar, and couldn't make a dollar, and are dependent on their parents for their own resources.

That's the way my mother looked at the subject, and if every other mother took the same line it would save a lot of our little girls from being what it's the unpreparedness of girls for life that makes so many of them make such a mess of it.

If every girl was taught some trade or profession by which she could support herself it would do away with the support of the unhappy marriage. Then a girl could wait until the man came along, instead of having to take the first man who proposed to her, because her family shows her that she is not to be taken for granted.

And it gives a girl such a sense of independence and dignity to know that she can stand on her own two feet, and that she is not dependent on her husband for her support. It makes her feel that she's a human being and some account of the thread of conversation we could satisfy an emotion as we ever get.

MAN AND BEAST ALIKE ARE DEVOTEES OF DANCING

Madame Pavlova Talks of Her Art, Her Home and Her Pets.

By Vella Winner.

Pavlova of the poetic toes—Pavlova the incomparable. She is child, woman and artist in one, and all at once. She received me in the drawing room of her suite, wearing a short black skirt and a loose flowing jacket of cherry-colored, chambray, which threw a striking relief her raven-like hair, sallow skin and eyes so big, so vivid and so penetrating that they are to her face what her toes are to her dancing, the transmuting vehicle of an inward fire.

Only her eyes seem to belong to the Pavlova of the stage, always glancing about with the quickness of a bird and always holding you subject to her thought. She was a long time and he is just so happy to see her stage costume.

"I cannot afford to," she smiled. "I must work for hours of every day if I would keep at my best." Pavlova is a woman. It is difficult to associate work with her exquisite, airy dancing, but even the flutter of her marvellously flexible fingers is a thing of opalescent beauty, work in life and in such a tiny woman, scarcely weighing 100 pounds, that it seems incredible to find her talking almost as long as she does. When I asked her she never tired of dancing, if she never felt the need of repose, she answered: "I rest, but to continue working in life and in art, I should not care to live."

Beautiful Women in England. "Even when I am at my home in England, I work," she said, picking up the thread of conversation where Poppy had broken it off. "I have a beautiful summer home, Ivy House, just outside London. It has large grounds, a big garden, a big public park, and it is 20 miles from London, so it is beautifully quiet and that is what I want after the hard season in Los Angeles where the people bloom and sing and sing and sing. There I can rest and relax and be no one, which is what I like. I have a young gazelle that frolics about the lawn and many pigeons, swans, parrots, that besides speaking English, French and German, can even say, 'I should worry' in American. "And the birds and animals do dance."

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

A Well-Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home-Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 2 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieve itching and scalp humor, and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."

San Francisco, Cal., March 25.—(U. P.)—Back in the mountains of the Philippines, where distinctions have flourished with ostrich like invulnerability, American pastris is coming to take the place of dog meat as the native food of the Bontoc tribe of Igorrotes.

A little fragment of a tribe, which for a year has been traveling about America, is now in San Francisco unwilling to return. On April 1 their agreement with the federal government expires and they must return. But it has been learned that the tribesmen have learned to eat pie and they'll only beg once more for now.

The natives are making a fight to remain in America, because they like to see movie shows and ride in jitney cars. "I have to buy seven pies a day," he said. "They are threatening to kill themselves if they have to go home pieless."

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS

To Ease Housekeeper's Burden.

Spoons used in cooking should be washed in a far as possible in metal ones that are kept for measuring.

To clean gilt frames and over-mantels use the water in which onions have been boiled, and they will look like new.

To preserve olivetti, first wash it in warm water, using no soap, and when dry, rub it over with a thin coat of sweet milk, then polish in the usual way.

If a little milk is mixed with pipe-clay before it is rubbed on the floor, the whitening will not come off.

To prevent the juice from oozing through the crust of a pie, brush the under side of the crust with the white of an egg.

Silver that is in daily use can be kept bright if it is left for several hours in very hot, strong borax water once a week.

Put a good big piece of charcoal in the dust pan of the boiler, and planted; it will keep the water from turning sour.

When you put the cereal on the night before, be careful to have it boil for at least 20 minutes before fixing the fire for the night. If this precaution is not taken the cereal may turn sour.

THE DINING ROOM

By Madame Malson.

A dining room should be one of the most attractive places in the home, for in it one literally begins and ends the day's work. It should breathe an atmosphere of rest, yet be full of radiant good cheer, and that is why I always hope that this room may be full of sunshine. Nothing has brought such a change for the better (in most cases) as the absence of the plate rail, as it usually held a heterogeneous mass of odd plates, platters, cups and saucers; in fact, it was a catch-all for whatever the family did not wish to happen to have a place for at that particular moment.

Whatever the baby could not have found a safe abiding or hiding place on the plate rail; father laid his pipe there and wished to find it there perhaps a week hence; school books rested there "until tomorrow morning," and so on—things without end.

The old style of dividing the wall space into three parts is also in most cases (praise be) the correct thing; it is one color straight up to the cornice molding, or if the walls are over nine feet the ceiling is dropped a foot or two, the idea being to give a dining room in paneling of real wood or of cream-enameled paint, many coats put on and rubbed down to a soft agatehite.

Period furniture is always good, as if the paper is figured. The reproductions are just about perfect. Can you imagine anything more inviting than a dining room done in "William and Mary," the finish being a dull, rich dark oak and the chair seats in a grayish blue hair cloth? A set of 10 pieces would mean an extension table, side table, a sideboard, china cabinet, two arm chairs and four side ones.

Use an imitation Chinese Chippendale rug on the floor, cream or oyster white linen runners on the table worked in blue cross stitch, brass or Sheffield handsticker with tall unshaded candles on the buffet and just the very necessary tea or coffee service; avoid all cluttering of small silver and keep all dignified and plain. Hang no pictures unless they are old family portraits with no place else to hang them.

Arrange the shelves of the china closet without crowding; put extra place and all extra services in the butler's pantry. See that the swing door moves noiselessly, for I have dined where the "squeak" of the door every time the waiter entered was most annoying. Although the family were apparently used to it, a breakfast set in old Canton blue would be charming in this room.

Put a screen in the doorway, and use just wide draperies of a figured blue linen having a bit of rose in it. The latter will be especially desirable if the paper is figured.

Superfluous Hairs Just Dissolve Away

Famous Beauty Secrets that Have Made the Theatrical Star, Valeska Suratt, America's Greatest Self-Made Beauty.

BY VALESKA SURATT

NEVER see a woman with superfluous hairs on her face or body that it does not give her a mind me of some cave woman. It is hideous and I don't want it, because so easily and thoroughly removed; at least, it becomes so by using the following which never fails. You moisten the hairs to be removed with sulfo solution. You see the hair dissolves away in quite a remarkable manner. You then wash it off. The skin is left clear, soft and beautiful. The splendid feature is that it can be used on the tender skin or any part of the body, with perfect safety. It can be obtained at any drug store. Ordinary depilatories are harsh and leave a red or irritated spot where applied. But instead of burning off the hair and injuring the skin, no matter how tough, sulfo solution dissolves the hair and is a positive benefit to the skin.

LOOKING OLD—I am particularly proud of the results of my skin restorative, which is a cream made by dissolving two tablespoons of glycerine and two ounces of alcohol in a half pint of hot water. This is the most astonishing thing I have ever found. Making crows' feet, deep wrinkles and lines disappear with great rapidity. It makes the skin healthy, youthful and vigorous, and by faithful use you will soon see a tremendous improvement in your appearance. The sulfo solution can be obtained at any drug store. This also makes the most economical cream you ever get.

FALLING—I am known as the only woman on the American stage who wears no hair switches or other hair make-alikes. Follow my suggestion, and see my hair as it is. It is a half a pint of alcohol and half a pint of water (or blue you may use) and a little of any gum, if you wish, and add one ounce of beta-nolol. It has powerful action on the hair, and will pull out the roots and stop the hair from falling. It will be starting in its results.

PREPAREDNESS—There is only one real skin beautifier I have ever known and this will remove freckles, blemishes and other blemishes so promptly as to surprise you. My own formula, which is as follows: Mix two tablespoons of glycerine with half a pint of hot water and add one ounce of zintone, which you can obtain at any drug store. This use of this gives an absolutely perfect complexion. You can positively depend upon it.

T. K. C.—I am sorry you were disappointed in not getting the sulfo solution from your druggist. My secretary will get it for you and send it in the sulfo solution. Secretary to Valeska Suratt, Thompson Bldg., Chicago, and enclose the price which is one dollar.

SISANA M. N.—My formula for removing blackheads is the only quick and sure way; by sprinkling some talcum powder on a sponge made wet with hot water. The talcum powder will remove them big and small. The talcum powder can be obtained at any drug store.

IN DOUBT—Yes, really all face powders are too chalky, and make the face look unnatural. I have a fine, smooth, smooth skin, and it is not detectable. It is now obtainable at drug stores. Valeska Suratt, Face Powder, in white and flesh tints.

M. O. C.—I advise you not to use mechanical instruments for nose development. Though it is impossible to assure such a development, yet the following has been successful in many cases. A half a cup of sugar and two ounces of tincture should be dissolved in half a pint of cold water and of this two teaspoons taken three or four times a day. You can secure the tincture at any drug store.

Large Crowd at Social—Kirkpatrick Council, Knights and Ladies of Security, held its open social and dance last Friday night in Moose hall. The hall was crowded to the limit of its capacity. An interesting musical and literary program was given.

Received Veterans' Jewel—Jake J. Baumgardner of Echo, who for the past 29 years has been a member of Overland lodge No. 23, I. O. E., has recently been sent a veteran jewel by Grand Secretary E. E. Sharon, Mr. Baumgardner is 80 years of age, and well known in Umatilla county.

Junior Moose to Meet—The Junior Order of Moose is deeply interested in a singing party to be given next Friday evening at the Oakes. Special music and refreshments are features promised.

Aged Commander Idol of His Soldiers Field Marshal Count von Haeseler is 80 Years Old but Still Keen as a Straght as an Arrow. Berlin, March 25.—(I. N. S.)—Field Marshal Count von Haeseler, 80 years old, but still his horse as straight as an arrow, is the adviser of the crown prince and the real commander at Verdun.

The bronzed and grizzled warrior is the idol of his soldiers. He is a veteran, indeed, for he fought throughout the wars of 1813, 1814 and 1815. Despite his age, Count von Haeseler is one of the most modern and un-derstandably one of the most important of German generals.

Bulgarians Have Grain for Export 100,000 Murderers Free, Says Warden

Budapest, March 25.—(I. N. S.)—The paper Het states that Bulgaria possesses much more grain than the population needs until the next harvest. The surplus is estimated at nearly 40,000 carloads, and will be sent to Germany and Austria-Hungary as soon as possible. The kingdom is also able to furnish great quantities of other foodstuffs and limited shipments of meat, especially pork and mutton, to the central power.

Kansas City, March 25.—There are more criminals at large and unpunished in the United States than in any other nation, declares J. K. Coddling, warden of the Kansas penitentiary. "There are 1,000,000 murderers at large," he said. "Germany convicts 90 per cent of her criminals, England 80 per cent, the United States 25 per cent of most especially in this country, 15,000,000 a day."
