Whet Your Appetites. WHEN I hear people talking about their jaded appetites I feel like telling them to follow the seasons. So far as the average table is concerned, it knows no seasons; mid-winter finds it bearing fresh tomatoes, lettuce and other vegetables and the fruits that grow naturally within an ordinary radius of it only in the warm months. Rapid means of communication and the skilled hand of the gardener have annihilated the seasons. Appetites are satiated and there are no longer reasonable foods to tempt them. What the gardener fails to offer the canner produces in abundance. Fresh fruits and vegetables preserved and fresh vegetables and fruits is steadily diminishing. "I wish tomatoes tasted as delicious to me now as they did when I was back on the farm," remarked a man within my hearing the other day. Later I learned that he was very fond of tomatoes and had them on his table the year round. It was not a wonder that they were ceasing to please his palate. "Back on the farm" he had only sun-kissed tomatoes that glistened in their ruddy health and carried all the delicious flavors with which nature endows this particular vegetable. It is only a few hours between the north and the south. The fruits of the north are shivering through the winter, down toward the equator where smiling flowers are blooming in the garden. With the progressiveness that are common to the age, vegetables and fruit are being raised down there for northern consumption. Fruits and vegetables out of season may be considered delicacies. Possibly they are not within the reach of all, but each year is bringing them nearer to the average table, and even now the quantities of such products that are used startle by their quantity when they are in season. It would be wrong to say that there is nothing tempting about the sight of a strawberry or tomato in mid-winter. But neither of them has the flavor to be found during the regular season. Also, they are more readily digested and the nourishment in them is larger in percentage and easier to assimilate. In connection with this subject, a friend recently remarked to me: "I have always a good appetite and never suffer from indigestion. I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I eat vegetables and fruits only in their seasons. I never eat berries in the winter, but I consume them in large quantities when they are in season. I follow the same course in the case of all fruits and vegetables. Nature seems to have mapped out a diet for us. But we rebel and switch things around until we dull our appetites and ruin our digestive organs." It might be remarked that in the following diet prescribed by nature there is a lighter tax upon the pocket-book. When fruits and vegetables are most abundant and the best to eat they are also the cheapest. If your appetite is dull and satiated and things begin to taste very much alike, try regulating your diet by the seasons. Spring is well advanced and summer with its blessings is near at hand. There will be plenty of vegetables and fruits from which to choose. Cut down your allowance of meats and stick to the lighter ones in the garden. After your winter diet you will find the change a very welcome one. You will soon enjoy the rich offerings of the seasons and find your appetite keen and your digestive apparatus in good working order.

Bed Time Tales

Billy Robin Finds Advice Is Worthless. FOR the first day or two after Billy Robif and his little mate arrived in the garden they were quite content to rest and eat, for they were hungry and tired from the long journey. But as soon as they were rested and fed, they began thinking about the nest. "That old apple tree was all very well last year," declared Billy; "but I think we had better look around a bit before building. Maybe we can find a better location." "I don't know about that," answered Mrs. Billy; "I liked the nest in the apple tree. Why not stay there?" For, you see, Mrs. Billy was very anxious to get to building, and she was so intent on his own talk seemed just a waste of time to her. "Oh, of course, it would do," admitted Billy; "but I mean to get advice on this matter. Maybe we can find a much better place." "How can I build a nest and leave the apple tree last year, maybe he will have a new place in mind now." So Billy darted away, leaving Mrs. Billy to wait with what patience she could muster. "Billy," grumbled Mrs. Billy, when she noticed that Chirpy and Billy had begun what appeared to be a long confab. "I'll build a nest in the apple tree. Sawyer Is Injured. Corvallis, Or., May 1. — A Mr. Thorne of Bellefontaine was brought to the city hospital Saturday with a broken arm and other injuries received in the Woodcock sawmill Friday afternoon. The injured man was an employee of the mill and the operator of the host did not know he was near the cable when he started the machinery. He was caught in the cable and whirled around the shaft several times before the machine was stopped. Besides a broken arm his shoulder was badly wrenched.

THIRTEENTH BIENNIAL OF WOMEN'S CLUBS DRAWING ATTENTION

Hundreds of Women in Empire State Interested in Federation Meeting.

9000 CLUBS REPRESENTED

Arrangements Are Being Made to Take Care of About 15,000 Visitors on Eventful Occasion.

The thirteenth biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in New York city May 23 to June 2 is now occupying the time and attention of hundreds of women of the Empire state.

The headquarters of the local biennial board will be open throughout the convention on the mezzanine floor of Hotel Astor and will continue to be the meeting place of all local and visiting club women, as it has been since the board was elected in 1914. The chairman, Mrs. William Grant Brown, and the chairmen of all committees, with stenographers and clerks, are daily carrying out the details necessary for the success which will bring forth the hearty cry "New York, New York!" from the beginning to the finish of the convention.

9000 Clubs Represented. The representation of 2,500,000 women through 9000 clubs and 11 national organizations is bound to create unusual interest and dictate the wisest judgment and action of womanhood. The hotels committee reports the highest number of reservations ever made at any biennial, and urges the necessity of immediate notification with all details from others who wish accommodations, the following being the scheduled headquarters for the different delegations:

- Astor—Official headquarters for the General Federation board of directors, officials, chairmen of committees, official guests, speakers and the Texas, Illinois, Kentucky, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota delegations. Belmont—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin.
- Biltmore—California, Michigan and Ohio.
- Great Northern—Alabama, District of Columbia, Idaho, North Carolina and Oregon.
- Empire—Arkansas, Indiana, New Jersey and New Hampshire.
- Murray Hill—Nevada, South Carolina and Wyoming.
- Netherland—Florida and Maine.
- Belmont—Arizona, Kansas and Oklahoma.
- The Plaza—Georgia, Maryland, Tennessee and West Virginia.
- Vanderbilt—Louisiana, Mississippi, Utah and Washington.
- Waldorf-Astoria—Pennsylvania.
- Fourteenth East Sixtieth—Connecticut and Virginia.

15,000 Visitors Expected. Through authoritative information, it is learned that nearly every one of the clubs will send delegates and many of them alternates as well. Besides these, there will be about 15,000 more visitors, all of whom will be met at trains or boats in arrival by the convention committee, which has detailed a subcommittee at each station, with Boy Scouts as escorts for the travelers.

This committee, which has issued a detailed folder of directions, can be located by a standard, bearing the letters, "G. F. W. C."

The seventh regiment armory will be convention hall for the regular sessions, and at Hotel Astor conferences on all subjects will be held, every hour of day and evening having been already fixed.

The excursion committee has planned trips through Queens county to Coney Island, Ellis Island, Blackwell Island by boat, a sightseeing trip around the city by buses, and historical pilgrimages to be personally conducted by a subcommittee.

Many Luncheons Planned. Luncheon scheduled will satiate the most varied and fastidious appetites, and so far as can be learned they have been arranged somewhat in the following order:

- Hotel Astor: The Board of Directors and the Literature and Library Extension committee, May 24; the art committee and the legislative committee, May 25; Mrs. John Hays Hammond's luncheon to the state presidents, May 24; conservation department and the music committee, May 27; literature committee, May 28; local biennial press committee, Mrs. Phillip N. Moore's luncheon and the credentials committee, May 30; civil service club.
- The civics department will be guests of Harold S. Buttenehm, editor of The American City, at a luncheon May 25.
- The Society of Kentucky Women, May 27.
- Colony club: There will be a luncheon at the Colony club, through
