FTER MISS CHAMELEON learned from Wise Mr. Owl that the eggs in the rubbish pile were alligator eggs and that Mrs. Gater had laid them under the rubbish the quicker to hatch them, she was more than ever interested in her find.

"I think I'll stay near here, where I can watch those things," she decided. "I'm tired of living over there in the bushes, anyway. I'll stay right here under this tree, where I can see everything Mrs. Gater does."

Now moving was no work at all for back to her old home to tell it good-Chameleon, She didn't even go She simply hunted out a spot under some tall, drooping fern leaves, the tree from which she had seen Mrs. Gater, where the shade was. cool and the shelter ample, and there she stayed.

And indeed Miss Chameleon was right-everything turned out just as away who had predicted.

So many ants ambled past her hiding place that she ate her fill without moving more than her long, darting tongue. The fern leaves hid her so The fern leaves hid her so well that the larger creatures of the woods who, had they guessed Miss Chameleon was near, might have been glad to eat her for their dessert, went right by her home without noticing her. Of course, the fact that she had turned herself a dull brown, exactly matching the color of the leaf mold under the ferns, protected her quite as much as the overhanging fern

Chat No. 8

WITH yesterday's crowds in attendance at the park, we had an opportunity of demonstrating our splendid arrangements for picnic parties. We have built new pavilions and bowers in the grounds, equipped them with new tables and chairs, and we have had constructed a large kitchenette, where maids are in attendance to assist in the preparation of coffee, tea or chocolate.

A picnic bureau has been established where you can make reservations of tables acco to the size of your party. Call Sellwood 230, and state on what day you are planning your outing. Also give the time and the number of people you expect, and when you arrive at the park you will find all preparations made for your convenience

An entertaining musical pro-gram will be given twice daily by the Columbia Ladies' Orchestra in the Auditorium. Miss Harriet Leach, prima donna at The Oaks this week, will be heard in solo selections, while Miss Gertrude Hoeber, a member of the orchestra, will sing specialty numbers.

Excellent car service is provided, with Oaks cars leaving First and Alder streets every few minutes. Oregon City, Bull Run and Estacada interurban cars also stop at The Oaks. Launch service is open to the park from the west end of Morrison-street bridge. JOHN F. CORDRAY.
