EXTENSIVE UNDERTAKING

Best Method of Getting Desired Results Will Be Considered Before Another Vote Is Taken.

Ashland, Or., May 25 .- By a mafority of 105 to 11, the farmers of the Talent-Ashland irrigation district by vote last Friday, indorsed the formation of the district, elected directors and demonstrated their determination to get water on 15,000 acres of land ner, O. The magnitude of the proposition can be more nearly realized by the fact that one of the propositions which is being seriously considered for bringing water to the land includes over 25 miles of main canal before a lateral branches off, a 2000 foot tunnel through a mountain, the utilization of 13 miles of creek bed, and a reservoir which cost about $900,000. The farmers and orchard men of the southerly end of the Rogue River valley are determined to have water. The few who have been able to get water upon their land have produced crops of alfalfa, fruit and vegetables which provide the only argument necessary. While in years of average rainfall, irrigation is not imperatively necessary, in the years that the rainfall falls below the average, irrigation would have meant a saving of hundreds of thousands to the Rogue River valley. The farmers of the Ashland-Talent district are alive to all this and are cooperating to secure that which all must have and which none alone can
