

Oregon Journal
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
Published every day, afternoon and morning (except Sunday afternoon), at the Journal Building, Broadway and Yamhill sts., Portland, Or.

petition by the "Dry" amendment which just as specifically cuts out beer coming from other states. To the lay mind this would be encouraging home industry with a vengeance.

It seemed unbelievable that the prediction would come true that a German undersea commerce carrier could cross the Atlantic, and discharge cargo in an American port.

LIEUTENANT ADAIR

THE body of Lieutenant Adair is to be brought home for burial.

In life, there is no such thing as paying for the service of a soldier in his summons to duty. In death, there is no full return that can be made to those who suffer by his fall.

It is not possible to soften the sorrow of his surviving kindred. There is no atonement that can be made for the great sacrifice.

But a people can acknowledge and appreciate. They can show their appreciation. They can honor the memory of the fallen soldier.

German resourcefulness has given the world something new in the commercial submarine which arrived at Baltimore yesterday.

AFTER FOURTEEN YEARS

OPTION holders under the Morson Carey Act irrigation project are taking steps to form an association with a view of bringing about the early completion of the works.

Morson now has filed with the Desert Land Board an application for an extension of his old contracts. Before granting any extension the board should carefully consider the proposal of the option holders.

NO SUCH ANIMAL

TIGHTENING of the Anglo-French restrictions on neutral commerce is indicated in the order withdrawing previous orders in council under the declaration of London.

A NEW QUESTION

AN INTERESTING situation that may grow out of the people's votes on the "Beer" and "Dry" amendments at the next state election has been suggested.

rubber, metallic ores and other raw materials and certain articles such as agricultural and mining machinery, clocks, watches, furniture, etc., which could be used only incidentally in war.

The only nation to formally ratify the declaration of London was the United States, April 24, 1912. France, however, embodied its provisions in its naval instructions and Germany likewise incorporated them in the prize ordinance of 1914.

Germany and Austria-Hungary agreed upon condition of reciprocity, but Great Britain, France and Russia declined to adopt it without certain additions and modifications.

Germany and Austria-Hungary agreed upon condition of reciprocity, but Great Britain, France and Russia declined to adopt it without certain additions and modifications.

Speaking of international law, it may be said, in fact, that "there is no such animal." The only law recognized is the law of the jungle.

HER CHIEF FIGURE

CRISES are the test of men. The rise of Lloyd-George is the proof. He is not a trained militarist.

But he is the one man England turned to as Kitchener's successor. No other holds so acknowledged a place in public confidence.

Theodore Roosevelt, upon his return from the debate on the subject of the judiciary, or the institution (through the recall or referendum or both) of greater popular control of the judiciary.

His offense was that he sought better conditions for the poor of England. He strove to bridge the deep and broad chasm between wealth and poverty.

The Birth Control Decision

Portland, July 8.—To the Editor of The Journal.—Judge Langmuir has his trial set for the 11th inst. The judicial rulings with regard to women in the Maragret Sanger birth control book sale decision.

Nowhere in the world was Privilege and Plutocracy more strongly entrenched, and nowhere were those twin blights on a nation more courageously or more successfully assailed.

But war is a leveller. Extremity and crisis break down castes and ranks. With the great German military power looking across the English channel, England took stock of her men.

A great coal strike broke over England and the munition factories were threatened with paralysis.

With the national exigency imperiled, England has been peculiarly subject to disturbances. Labor troubles, the Irish rebellion, the inability to provide the army with war material and other difficulties broke over the nation.

In every instance, the country called for Lloyd-George to be the Moses, and in every case he brought order out of chaos.

It isn't so much Lloyd-George, the man, as the things that Lloyd-George stands for that caused Englishmen to turn to him.

War is the test. Extremity is the measure of what kind of man can best help succor a country.

On the subject of contraband there was specified a list of 17 groups of articles which should never be classified as contraband in any circumstances.

War is the test. Extremity is the measure of what kind of man can best help succor a country.

Letters From the People

England in her days of crisis and trouble. In the supreme position as secretary of state for war, with all the mighty responsibilities of England in arms upon him, Lloyd-George, by the qualities of heart and mind that have made him the nation's greatest reliance, is the most dangerous single force which England's enemies have to face.

Admonishes Compatriots

Mount Hood, Or., July 8.—To the Editor of The Journal.—In answer to P. M. Penners, let me say: A man who calls our president a lopsided professor just shows that he is bullheaded.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

Why does not Mr. Penners go home and visit the Kaiser? He ought to be at the White House, and he ought to be a good country for him.

and words each. I will venture to say that the fewer words the better for him, as the rank and file of people do not look with favor upon the Hughes-Rosell Perkins combination as an indication of a move in the right direction.

Hughes indorses everything Roosevelt says, and Roosevelt sanctions everything Hughes says. Thus we have two hearts that beat as one.

When New York City's soldiers get back home they will be able to assure Broadway that a considerable part of the United States lies west of the Hudson.

An Indiana man wants a divorce because his wife chews tobacco. Looks like it's going to be a long time before women get equal rights in the hoosier state.

The army's medical department promises to take care of the soldiers' health, and in view of what the army doctor has done it is safe to say they will make good.

The precautionary suggestion is made that with the colored people in the same political bed, Mr. Hughes ought to sleep in the middle.

Germany and France are killing off new synthetic goods as useless consumers. Imported bologna sausage is a rarity these days, and in view of the fact that nobody will be very sorry about it.

New York has been interested in a six-day campaign for simple business hours, and the movement for New York, the idea seems to have been all right but the period allotted for accomplishment entirely too short.

JOURNAL JOURNEYS

70--The Marble Caves of Josephine

Charles H. Flory, assistant district United States forester, says that a visit to "The Marble Caves of Josephine" richly repays any traveler.

About 40 years ago, so the story runs, a hunter chased a wounded bear into a hole in the side of a deeply wooded canyon in the wilds of Josephine county, in southern Oregon.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

A Good Samaritan Solution

Portland, July 7.—To the Editor of The Journal.—I have just printed some petition forms and have them placed in circulation or put in the postoffice or the banks for signers, to help the people of Mexico.

There are 421 birds in the world, and it is estimated that there are 421 million people in the world.

Answers

Portland, July 7.—To the Editor of The Journal.—Please answer through the columns of your valuable paper the following questions.

World population figures are at hand, and the figures are as follows: 1,500,000,000 in 1914, as the best estimate.

Courtesy of Aviators

A well known Canadian journalist, recently back from the front, described to me a remarkable air duel which he witnessed between a British and a German flying C. L. Langford.

So numerous have "days" and "weeks" for the special observance of social virtues become that we do not pay much heed to the announcement of them any more.

The national conference of weights and measures, through the cooperation of governors and mayors, organized a six day campaign, which is now on, for the promotion of honesty among retailers.

Honesty Week

From the Detroit News. So numerous have "days" and "weeks" for the special observance of social virtues become that we do not pay much heed to the announcement of them any more.

PERTINENT COMMENT AND NEWS IN BRIEF

SMALL CHANGE

Vancouver's matrimonial business apparently has not been shut down because June moved away.

It won't be long before golf enthusiasts will be saying we can't have a president who isn't one of them.

Mexico's mental attitude seems to have been that of the rebellious small boy who wants to see how big he can get before getting a spanking.

A newspaper columnist says women are taking up vices that men have discarded. Anybody know of any vices that women have taken up?

When New York City's soldiers get back home they will be able to assure Broadway that a considerable part of the United States lies west of the Hudson.

An Indiana man wants a divorce because his wife chews tobacco. Looks like it's going to be a long time before women get equal rights in the hoosier state.

The army's medical department promises to take care of the soldiers' health, and in view of what the army doctor has done it is safe to say they will make good.

The precautionary suggestion is made that with the colored people in the same political bed, Mr. Hughes ought to sleep in the middle.

Germany and France are killing off new synthetic goods as useless consumers. Imported bologna sausage is a rarity these days, and in view of the fact that nobody will be very sorry about it.

New York has been interested in a six-day campaign for simple business hours, and the movement for New York, the idea seems to have been all right but the period allotted for accomplishment entirely too short.

THE CANDLE GOUCH

The Sunday school children of Beaverton have undertaken relief work for the war sufferers of Belgium.

The News-Times asserts that Florida has nothing on Forest Grove, since many a tree is blooming in that charming city.

"Last week might well be classed as show week in Gold Beach," says the Globe, "having had a show five nights out of the week."

"There will be plenty of saw and hammer music in Joseph this summer. The town is being feverishly building growth," says the Herald.

Growth of the town of Dilley in Washington county is shown by the fact that the school board has ordered two large classrooms and three smaller ones to the public school building.

Challenge in Sheridan Sun: "If you want to live long and die old, there were three deaths in the county last week that averaged 40 years apiece. Something in longevity town?"

The press of Oregon at present abounds with such items as the lowest town in the county, the sunbather after the rain, and crops and gardens are looking fine, but hay harvest is later than usual.

Better roads item in McMinnville News-Reporter: "In its agitation for a more efficient transportation system in this county, the committee is laying stress on the improvement of the latest roads."

The Sheridan Commercial club has endorsed the new plan.

THE HOME-GROWN MUSE

They say that all things come to him who patiently waits, and does his best, and our product, Woodrow Wilson, will prove that this is true.

With "old glory" waving our flag, the "ship of state" is guided.

As in Washington's and Lincoln's time, the War will end in Europe, and in Mexico we will be the victors.

For in our great and noble ship of state we will lead you to the top.

George Washington was father of this country in its day.

But Wilson is the greatest of our land and our time.

And our oak asks for wood is right for all humanity.

THE ONCE OVER

The Candle Grouch

From E. W. Howe's Monthly. Notice—I like to be let alone. And I appreciate what I preach; I let others alone. You are busy and noisy, that is your privilege, but let me out of it. I've seen it all, and don't care for it.

I enjoy the respectable amenities of life, and object to nothing expected of a man of my age, but I seriously object to the fool who comes along and wants to play with me. I have heard his jokes; I don't like his talk; I don't like his schemes. I have tried it all, and demand that the fool do not hunt me up in my retirement.

Clarton notes, when sounded properly, do not disturb me, if it is announced in the newspapers that a demonstration is desired, to make a place and hear appointed, ready to march, if sufficiently interested, but called by the organizer of the parade.

If a committee decides that it is important to have a parade, let an announcement be made in the newspapers, with the name and address of the Treasurer, if interested, I will send you a program, but I give you no guarantee that I will be there. I do not intend to be a manager of the parade, nor any of his assistants.

I do not intend to be a manager of the parade, nor any of his assistants.

I do not intend to be a manager of the parade, nor any of his assistants.

JOURNAL JOURNEYS

70--The Marble Caves of Josephine

carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water. The walls are thickly studded with marvelously wrought forms of queer looking flowers and vegetable that appear as if just plucked from some giant's garden.

From the ceilings hang great pointed stone columns that look like pillars of all sizes, from huge pillars that are like columns of a cathedral to tiny ones that are like the spines of books.

The floors are strewn with broken fragments that have fallen from above, and among the debris are many of the most beautiful and unusual shapes of a soft alabaster whiteness of exquisite beauty that have been viewed closely in the lamp light.

As one wanders through the dark chambers, silent as the tomb, with only a flickering candle to light the way, a feeling of awe comes over you, you think of ghosts and goblins, and wonder as if just plucked from some giant's garden.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

For countless ages the series of galleries, passages, rooms, chimneys and "bottomless pits" have been slowly carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

For countless ages the series of galleries, passages, rooms, chimneys and "bottomless pits" have been slowly carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

For countless ages the series of galleries, passages, rooms, chimneys and "bottomless pits" have been slowly carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

THE ONCE OVER

The Candle Grouch

From E. W. Howe's Monthly. Notice—I like to be let alone. And I appreciate what I preach; I let others alone. You are busy and noisy, that is your privilege, but let me out of it. I've seen it all, and don't care for it.

I enjoy the respectable amenities of life, and object to nothing expected of a man of my age, but I seriously object to the fool who comes along and wants to play with me. I have heard his jokes; I don't like his talk; I don't like his schemes. I have tried it all, and demand that the fool do not hunt me up in my retirement.

Clarton notes, when sounded properly, do not disturb me, if it is announced in the newspapers that a demonstration is desired, to make a place and hear appointed, ready to march, if sufficiently interested, but called by the organizer of the parade.

If a committee decides that it is important to have a parade, let an announcement be made in the newspapers, with the name and address of the Treasurer, if interested, I will send you a program, but I give you no guarantee that I will be there. I do not intend to be a manager of the parade, nor any of his assistants.

I do not intend to be a manager of the parade, nor any of his assistants.

I do not intend to be a manager of the parade, nor any of his assistants.

JOURNAL JOURNEYS

70--The Marble Caves of Josephine

carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water. The walls are thickly studded with marvelously wrought forms of queer looking flowers and vegetable that appear as if just plucked from some giant's garden.

From the ceilings hang great pointed stone columns that look like pillars of all sizes, from huge pillars that are like columns of a cathedral to tiny ones that are like the spines of books.

The floors are strewn with broken fragments that have fallen from above, and among the debris are many of the most beautiful and unusual shapes of a soft alabaster whiteness of exquisite beauty that have been viewed closely in the lamp light.

As one wanders through the dark chambers, silent as the tomb, with only a flickering candle to light the way, a feeling of awe comes over you, you think of ghosts and goblins, and wonder as if just plucked from some giant's garden.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

For countless ages the series of galleries, passages, rooms, chimneys and "bottomless pits" have been slowly carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

For countless ages the series of galleries, passages, rooms, chimneys and "bottomless pits" have been slowly carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

These wonderful caverns are located about 30 miles southwest of Grants Pass within the Sitavivona national forest. A presidential order has established them as a national monument.

Neither written description nor photographs can convey to the reader any idea of the weird and weird region of strange, fantastic beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated.

For countless ages the series of galleries, passages, rooms, chimneys and "bottomless pits" have been slowly carved from the solid limestone rock by the dissolving effect of water.

The hunter feared to enter the black, forbidding opening, thickly strewn with fallen rocks and choked with tall bushes; so the bear was allowed to escape.

At the time the hunter realized that Mr. Bruin had guided him to the portal of one of Oregon's greatest natural wonders, The Marble Caves of Josephine.

STORIES OF STREET TOWN

Didn't Pray Hard Enough

Two Scotchmen were standing in a public house one day discussing the war until the subject became threadbare and after that the talk shifted to an accident suffered by one of the party, some time ago. The injured one had benefited under the Oregon compensation law but his remuneration, so he contended, had been inadequate.

"I did," said the other.

"You did not," replied the friend waxing emphatic.

"Then you didn't pray hard enough," shouted the friend.

Her Parentage Ascertained

From Life. Dora had just returned from Sunday school, where she had been for the first time. "What did my little daughter learn this morning?" asked the fond father. "That I am a child of Satan," was the booming reply.

What's Your Name, Witness?

"Malguenac," the peasant answered. "Your full name," the judge said. "It's the same, your honor," said Malguenac, "full or sober."

From Washington Star

"Louis Barthele, the French statesman," said a Consul of France, "is going to make a bitter war against alcohol after the war is finished."

"Barthou has sad facts and funny facts to show the ravages of alcohol in France. One of his funny facts is about a Breton peasant, who was asked in a certain village, 'What is your name?'"

"Malguenac," the peasant answered. "Your full name," the judge said. "It's the same, your honor," said Malguenac, "full or sober."

Her Parentage Ascertained

From Life. Dora had just returned from Sunday school, where she had been for the first time. "What did my little daughter learn this morning?" asked the fond father. "That I am a child of Satan," was the booming reply.

</