Lad's Head Crushed. LaPointe's head was terribly crushed. He lived five minutes after a machine of the Ambulance Service Co. had rushed him to the hospital.

One of the bricks that had been loosed on this coaster flew through the windshield of the automobile and smashed it.

Gaines, in his statement to the district attorney, said that the high embankment obscured his view of Forty-first street to the south completely.

Wagenblast said that the children, in coasting on the dangerous hill, usually posted a guard at Hazelton avenue to warn the juvenile speeders of approaching vehicles.

Deputy Coroner Smith at once started an investigation. This accident comes as a climax to a number of similar collisions as the result of children playing in the street with the coasters.

Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, who is en route to the border to confer with General Funston, will be associated with the commission.
