What Society is Doing

BY NONA LAWLER

MR. AND MRS. RUSSELL D. CARPENTER, who will depart the latter part of the summer for Tucson, Arizona, where Mr. Carpenter will take up his business, were the honored guests last evening at a most delightful dancing party given jointly by Mr. and Mrs. William R. Kierman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Shea and Mr. and Mrs. Rube R. Adams, at the Laurelhurst club house. About 75 couples enjoyed an evening at dancing. The affair was charmingly arranged, the hall being decorated with an artistic arrangement of yellow snapdragons and vine maple leaves. Before the supper dance a lovely bouquet of the little yellow thistles was presented to Mrs. Carpenter. A grand march followed with Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter standing to receive the guests.

Mrs. and Mrs. Abelli Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Luis Abelli (Crystal Hyland), whose wedding was an event of much social interest Easter Monday afternoon, have returned from their honeymoon trip in the east and are at home to their friends at the Benson hotel.

Luncheon Hostess.

Miss Maria Irvine was the charming hostess at a luncheon given at her home on West Park street Saturday afternoon, July 8, in honor of Miss Genevieve Landeen, bride-elect.

A variety of yellow flowers were arranged artistically about the rooms, a large basket of California poppies and tulle centering the table. The color scheme was carried out in detail in each course of the luncheon and a novel feature was introduced when Chinese favors were presented to the guests by a native Chinese.

Covers were laid for Miss Genevieve Landeen, the Misses Georgia Irvine, Florence Johnson, Effie Vanderveen, Helen Cowles, Edith Mumby, Hazel Bowman, Dorothy Bowman, Gene Gumm and the hostess, Miss Marie Irvine.

"Phantom" Film at Columbia.

THERE have been lots of Raffles plays, and in lots of others the Sherlock Holmes' idea has been worked in, but the "Phantom," which opened today at the Columbia, does what would appear impossible—combines a society crook and a sleuth. Frank Keenan is the Ince star, who is entrusted with portraying the combined role, and he is capably assisted by Enid Markey.

Phantom Farrell is a gentleman's crook who specializes in big jewel robberies. With the intention of looting a mansion during a weekend party he secures entry in the guise of a detective. Dan Cupid, however, sticks an oar into the little game and the crook becomes enamored of the daughter of the man of the house.

Farrell experiences a change of heart but much to his surprise the robbery takes place according to schedule. Farrell goes on a still hunt for the robber and has just secured a confession from the promising young brother of the girl and is about to restore the jewels, when a central office man arrives. The officer recognizes Farrell and the society crook escapes in a sensational manner.

The play throughout is a succession of thrills which add greatly to the gripping interest possessed by the story itself. The climax of the play comes with the Phantom's escape and well justifies the assertion that it is one of the most masterly episodes ever shown on the screen.

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish," two reels of condensed fun, will be the comedy. It gives Fairbanks a chance to cram in the maximum possible number of laughs to the foot and he lives up to all possibilities.

An excellent scenic, one of a series depicting out of the way places in the world, concludes the bill. It is entitled "Kiukajeu."

Child Performer Clever.

She's only 5 years old, and she doesn't talk very plain, but her name's Helen Hall, and she's a regular light opera prima donna.

Helen, wee mite that she is, was the big hit of the new bill at the Strand yesterday. Her papa, Willis Hall, is a polished performer, and her brother, aged 16, is a splendid little singer; but it's Helen, with her sophisticated baby ways, who catches the crowd. She has personality, and she can sing.

Billy Small, who dresses like a street Arab is supposed to but never does—except on the stage—has a good violin, on which he plays with power and finish. His selections are popular, and he almost stopped the show when he gave an imitation of an old time fiddler playing dance tunes.

Another charming number is that of George Stanley and company, the "company" being a pretty girl with nice clothes and a good voice. George impersonates an aged negro preacher, and is mighty funny without a trace of irreverence. They sing old time southern songs, and their act is a winner.

An ingenious mechanical production is "The Battle of the Navies" by means of which sea scenes are shown with a good deal of realism. A liner sunk by a submarine and a modern naval battle are two of the representations.

The Bluebird film, "The Heart of a Child," did not arrive in time for yesterday's shows, but will be shown today.

Want a Ten Day Clause.

Chicago, July 13.—(U. P.)—Mary Pickford and Honus Wagner and Charley Chaplin and Walter Johnson will all be in the same boat, if plans advanced by moving picture producers meeting here are carried out. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film company, advocated organization of a new national board of trade of moving producers, modeled on the National Baseball commissions, which restrictions are binding on movie players, just like those on the white slaves of the diamond. "We want a 10 day clause in all our contracts with actors," Laemmle said. "No producer should be permitted to take one actor away from another on expiration of contract until the former employer has a chance to get him again. We want heavy penalties for contract jumping and no tampering by other producers." Laemmle said baseball players and movie actors have about the same sort of temperaments, anyway.

President Will Be Notified Aug. 3 or 8

Washington, July 13.—(I. N. S.)—President Wilson probably will be formally notified of his renomination for the presidency on August 3 or August 8. The ceremony will take place at Shadow Lawn, N. J., the summer White House.

The Democratic managers awaited the announcement of the Republican date before asking President Wilson to designate the day and place for his notifications. It is understood the president is hesitating between the two dates mentioned.

Generosity Brings Trouble.

Centralia, July 13.—On a charge of drinking liquor in a public place, Chris Vanzone is awaiting trial in the local jail. He was arrested at the local depot Tuesday night by Patrolman Schriver, who asked the man for a drink and was accommodated.

Kittens Emulate Humans.

Whitestone, N. Y., July 13.—(U. P.)—Chased by a dog, two kittens tried aerial and submarine methods of escape. One was rescued from a well after a number of hours' work and a hazardous climb of 100 feet into a tree was necessary to rescue the other.

Redlet Squirrel.

"I CAN'T MAKE OUT what's the matter with Redlet," said Reddy Squirrel to his friend Timmy Graytail one summer noontime.

"What seems to be the trouble?" asked Timmy, and he was interested at once, because he liked both Reddy and Redlet and counted himself the best friend of both.

Reddy Squirrel scratched his tail three times and then said thoughtfully, "He don't eat anything."

"Fiddlesticks!" exclaimed Timmy. "He does."

"No, he doesn't," replied Reddy with a sorrowful shake of his head; "not one thing does he eat!"

Timmy looked at Reddy long and carefully. "Are you sure you are not sick, Reddy?" he finally asked. "Does anything hurt you, or are you hungry?"

"Nonsense, Timmy, do be sensible," retorted Reddy. "You can see, if you look, that I'm perfectly well, only I'm worried about Redlet—that's every single bit the matter. Why do you ask?"

"Because you think such silly things about him," replied Timmy promptly. "Any creature with half an eye can see that Redlet Squirrel is not starving himself! He's fatter and rounder than you are! Where did you get your idea?"

"I tell you I didn't get an idea," replied Reddy crossly; "I know! I took home some fine bits of lettuce this noon—lettuce that I stole so carefully from that garden across from the park. And Redlet, instead of gobbling it all up, as I had thought he would, didn't even taste it—wouldn't taste it even when I begged him to try a bite. And what's more, that's the third time that's happened!"

Timmy Graytail started.

"Um-um," said he finally, "that bears investigating. Meet me here tomorrow noon before you go for the lettuce and we'll see what can be done." And off he ran without another word. You see, Timmy had an idea, but he didn't want to tell it too soon.

Wouldn't taste it even when I begged him to try a bite.

The rabbit and the squirrel met at the same place at half an hour before noon on the next day.

"What now?" asked Reddy.

"Follow me," replied Timmy, and off they scampered through the bushes. Through the bushes, yes, and farther. Over the horse path, across a bare green lawn and under the shelter of some more bushes. And what do you suppose they saw there? They saw Redlet Squirrel feasting on cabbage and lettuce that was brought to him by two very happy looking little girls! No wonder he wasn't hungry when he got home? No wonder!

Bids for Pleasure.

THE writer of a letter desires to know what I recommend for dark circles under the eyes and for wrinkles. At the close of a winter's society season, questions of this character are frequently asked. They come from the women who have made society a form of dissipation.

Wrinkles and dark circles are not always due to a loss of rest or too much excitement, but they can be attributed frequently to such causes. A round of gaiety in stuffy ballrooms or dining rooms is likely to leave its traces upon the face. Over-indulgence in rich and unwholesome foods, late hours and an avoidance of healthful exercise necessitate the payment of a similar penalty.

Physicians find symptoms of physical disorders in the condition of the skin, and the circles and puffy sacks that appear under the eyes. Sometimes they recommend the "rest cure," but in many cases more serious treatment is necessary.

It is unfortunate that women often make such high bids for pleasure that the payment causes suffering and annoyance. When they cheat their bodies to give additional time to society, the cost of their pleasure is "entirely too high."

Loss of rest and sleep is a great producer of wrinkles. You have noticed when your body is weary and tired your face looks haggard and drawn. If your dissipation has not gone too far, a long sleep generally will restore the freshness to your cheeks and remove the lines from your face. If you persist in cutting down on the periods devoted to sleep, the time will come when it will take more than a night's rest to remove the traces of fatigue.

I am an advocate of activity, and still I am positive that a certain number of hours out of each 24 must be devoted to rest and sleep. During my working hours I put my heart and strength into my work. When I play, I give all my attention to play. When I reach that period which I devote to rest and sleep, I completely relax, both mentally and physically, for I know that in this condition I secure the greatest benefits while slumbering.

If you permit your serious duties to intrude upon the period of the day that should be devoted to recreation you make a great error. When pleasure and work overlap your sleeping period, you endanger your health as well as your appearance. If there is only one fixed period in your day it should be that portion devoted to sleep.

Perhaps you have been "living on your nerves." If you have and are, you approach the breaking point each day. You court the wrecking of your health and beauty. The little threadlike wrinkles that appear about your eyes and the dark circles that form under them are cautionary signals. You had better heed the signals.

Sleep is the great health and strength restorer. Excitement may keep you going for a short time without much sleep, but eventually you will reach the breaking point. Then it may be a very difficult thing for you to sleep—and sleep will be the very thing you need.

Sleep is a greater beautifier than any preparation chemists and physicians have to offer. Some of the most beautiful flowers close their petals in sleep. The most beautiful women keep their eyes closed at least eight hours out of 24.

You know you like a picnic. Who doesn't? Also we might add, everyone can't go away for a long vacation, but there are few who can't have a day in which to bring back good cheer and give the constitution a boost. We had hundreds of picnics yesterday. Many were groups of little ones and they did have a splendid time. But more picnics are coming. This is a regular picnic week. We're pleased, but we don't wonder at it. For there couldn't be a better picnic place.

Put on your knock-about duds and sports clothes. Pack the lunch basket. It doesn't matter a heap what you put in it, for you get hungry enough to enjoy cold soup on a picnic. But think of it. You won't even have to make your own coffee. The maid does that free of charge. Just bring the ground coffee and something to drink it in.

Our show is good and you'll like it. "The Astronomers" is full of life and music and every one of Knight's Troubadours is a winner. A new bill will begin Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow, Minnesota State Society will picnic at the Oaks. Those who have lived in the "gopher" state are invited to join the picnickers and have a jolly good time with the rest.

The Hoosiers will be here Saturday. The whole big society of Indianans and their families and friends are planning a great picnic dinner at 6 and an evening of old-time fun with dancing in the pavilion and games and songs.

In a short time Ferullo's Band will be here and give the public a treat that can't be beat.

The Oaks car leaves from First and Alder street every few minutes.
