

TWO INSTITUTIONS TO COOPERATE IN PLANS OF EXTENSION WORK Reed College and University of Oregon to Seek to Avoid Conflicts. COLLEGE FACULTY ACTIVE

Many Have Articles in Current Magazines—124 Applicants for Admission and 80 Already Admitted.

Three new members of the Reed College Record are in preparation of a report of the president covering the first five years of the college, a bulletin describing courses in commerce and industries of particular interest to young men preparing for commercial careers in the northwest and the annual announcement of Reed extension courses. The extension courses for 1916-1917 are being planned in cooperation with the University of Oregon. In order to avoid conflicts in dates, subjects and places and, in general, to make a combined offering of the two institutions be of the greatest possible service to the people of Portland, still further to promote this end, the publications of the University of Oregon will announce the Reed college courses and the publications of Reed college will announce the University of Oregon courses.

The registrar has brought before the committee on admission of students 124 applicants for admission in September. Of these, 80 had been admitted up to August 1. Faculty Activities. Among the recent publications of the faculty are: An article on "Political Thought of Social Classes" by William F. Ogburn and Delvin Peterson in the Political Science Quarterly for June, and a "Report of Psychological Tests at Reed College" by Eleanor Rowland and Gladys Lowden in the Journal of Experimental Psychology for June. The leading article in the History Teachers Magazine for June is by Kenneth S. Latourette on "Statewide Education in Social Hygiene." The leading article in the History Teachers Magazine for June is by Kenneth S. Latourette on "The History of the Far West—A Neglected Field." Harper's magazine for September will include an article under the title, "Should Students Study?" which is the substance of a commencement address given by Dr. Foster in June at Western Reserve university. The Yale Review for October will contain an article by Dr. Latourette on "Some Primary Factors in the Chinese Problem." An article by Harry B. Torrey on "Instinct and the Rational Life" will appear in an early number of the Scientific American.

Kelley Rees is Honored. At the annual meeting of the Classical Association of the Pacific states, held at Berkeley in July, Kelley Rees was elected president. Several members of the Reed college faculty are teaching in summer schools; Dr. Bertha Stuart at the University of California, Dr. Eleanor Rowland at the San Diego State Normal school, Dr. Max Cushing at Columbia university, and Professor Harold Merriam at the University of Colorado. Professor Norman Coleman gave a few lectures at the University of Oregon summer school. Professor Harry B. Torrey is at the biological station at Friday Harbor with a group of Reed college students. Professor Charles Botsford is traveling in the east and Professor Jasper Stahl is spending the summer in Maine.

To Teach in China. Professor George Bantam and family left August 1 from Vancouver, B. C., via steamship Montezuma for Peking, China, where Dr. Bantam is to become professor of German in the Tsing Hua college. Professors Knowlton, Ogburn, Foster and Rees took part in the Oregon tennis tournament at the Waverley club. Dr. Susan Almira Bacon, who is now in New Haven, expects to reach Portland early in September. Professor Frank L. Griffin has this summer completed his textbook embodying the results of his experiences the past five years conducting the course in mathematics for freshmen at Reed college. Professor Hastings has been elected a member of the American Society of Civic Engineers. He attended the convention of realty men in Portland and is cooperating with a committee of the Realty board of Portland in planning a realty college extension course to be given this year in the principles of real estate management.

Dr. Latourette Accepts Position. Dr. Kenneth S. Latourette has accepted a position as assistant professor of history in Denison university, Granville, Ohio. Robert Leigh is spending the summer with Horace Miller and Alvin Shaker at their camp for boys at Nahcotta on the coast of Washington. Mr. Leigh is one of the winners of the state department of education of the outdoor education teachers' certificates. Dr. Edward Sisson visited the college in July on his way to his camp at Seabeck on Hood's canal, Washington. Dr. Cath S. White, medical examiner of the college, and Professors Knowlton and Morgan left with President Foster Wednesday by automobile for Crater Lake.

Student Activities. A committee of the first class to graduate from Reed college, consisting of Joyce Kelley, chairman, D. M. Bruce and Annie Jordan Harrison is collecting information for the plan proposed by the class for insuring its members for the benefit of Reed college. Russell Kelley of the class of 1919 has been awarded the Jefferson high school scholarship for 1916-17. From the list of questions submitted by Reed college for the intercollegiate debates of next December, the University of Washington has chosen the question whether intercollegiate athletics should be abolished.

English Commander Is Not Yet Eighteen

Berlin, Aug. 5.—(I. N. S.)—Captain James Montagu Hillingdon, a war prisoner in the camp at Doberitz, is probably the youngest British officer of his rank. He is not yet 18 years old and commands a company with a brevet major when he was captured in one of the battles near Loos. The captain entered the army as a volunteer shortly after his sixteenth birthday and was a first lieutenant. He fought with distinction in many engagements and is treated with the greatest respect and consideration by the German military authorities.
