

CHEMICAL TESTS FAIL TO IDENTIFY POISON IN GLOCKNER'S STOMACH

Test for Morphine Under Way in Sandy Merchant's Death Mystery.

Chemical tests on the stomach of Fred Glockner, the Sandy merchant who died at the Good Samaritan hospital early Sunday morning, apparently from self poisoning, failed today to establish conclusively the nature of the drug used.

E. P. W. Harding, the chemist in charge of the analysis, completed his test to detect mercury early today. The test was negative, not a trace of this poison, which would have shown had bi-chloride of mercury been used, appearing.

He also tested the stomach for arsenic, and the presence of this substance was indicated in large quantities. This is not considered important because the body of Glockner had been partially embalmed before it was decided that an autopsy was necessary. The embalming fluid contains a large percentage of arsenic compounds.

Morphine Test Under Way.
An analysis to detect morphine is under way today many hours are required to complete it. If this test is negative, tests of several other poisons will be tried, although it is not believed that Glockner took any of the more violent caustic poisons as his death would have resulted more quickly.

The interest of Multnomah county officials will end with the completion of this analysis. The supposed suicidal attempt of Glockner took place in Clackamas county, and Mrs. Maude Zabriskie, the woman held pending the investigation, is in jail at Oregon City as a material witness in case an inquest is ordered.

Physician Changed Mind.
Deputy Coroner Smith, in explanation of the partial embalming, said that Saturday night, when it was known that Glockner was dying, he received a message from a physician who said positively that Glockner's condition was caused by morphine poison, the drug having been taken with suicidal intent. The physician, according to Smith, signified his readiness to sign a death certificate at once. When Glockner's body was delivered to the morgue early Sunday morning, Smith communicated with the relatives at Sandy and received orders to turn the body over to an undertaking establishment at Gresham.

Smith had already started the work of embalming. He was interrupted by the appearance of the physician, who had called him the night before. The latter told him that he was not certain what had caused death, that he could not sign a death certificate and that an autopsy was necessary.

Smith at once halted the work of embalming, but the embalming fluid had already been injected.

Suicide Theory Supported.
Oregon City, Or., Aug. 29.—The officers of Clackamas county are of the opinion that Fred Glockner, the Sandy merchant, met his death by self-administered poison. Sheriff Wilson, Coroner Stever and Deputy District Attorney Burke spent yesterday checking up statements made by interested parties and are confident that there is no evidence of foul play.

Statements made by Mrs. Maude Zabriskie are said to correspond with the statement made by Ike Dawson, the Sandy barber.

The officials found that there was so open enmity shown between Dawson and the dead man. A few nights prior to the poisoning, both Dawson and Glockner were sitting on a bench in front of a store in Sandy, eating ice cream cones and talking together. All who were intimate with Glockner at Sandy told of his threats of suicide. In a conversation Glockner is said to have taken exception to a statement that a man was a coward who committed suicide.

Mrs. Glockner told the officers that her husband had told her of a desire to jump off the Columbia river highway.

Contributing Charge Made.

Palmer C. Wilson, alias Clayton Wilson, alias Ross Sherman, alias Palmer Storm, aged 30, a jitney driver in the Linnton run, was arrested at second and Stark streets last night by Detectives Coleman and Snow on charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The complainant in the case is Sophia Sparks. Wilson was released on $500 bail. The warrant for Wilson's arrest was sworn to before Judge Langguth.

Authoress to Seek Material.

Miss Anne Shannon Monroe, the well known Oregon authoress, left her morning for Bend, Or., and will go from there to Prineville, as the guest of the Commercial Club of that city. She expects to visit Burns, Clatskanie, Heppner and other points on her trip through central Oregon in quest of material for a new book. It is expected that she will be the guest of Mr. Winnard. Miss Monroe will attend the Pendleton Round-Up before returning to Portland.

Indian Joyrides In Modern Hearse

Jim Tobin of Marysville May Think He Is a Sport, But Stunt Has Been Done Before.

Marysville, Cal., Aug. 29.—(U. P.)—Jim Tobin is just an untutored Indian, but he certainly knows how to entertain his family when his days are flush. The best is none too good for him.

So when he sold a mine on Slate creek, he determined to celebrate in style. Tobin had no appeal for Jim when he brought his squaw and papooses here, but he saw a discarded hearse in the rear of a livery stable and immediately purchased it.

Next he bought a watermelon apiece for the squaw and each of her six children, placed the whole family in the glass enclosed dead wagon and proudly jogged up and down Main street displaying to the wondering world his idea of "class" in celebrations. A trail of watermelon seeds and rinds marked the hearse's path.

When last seen, Jim was joyriding his hearse over the 60 mile trail towards home, the proudest Indian in California.

OREGON PROHIBITION LAW UNDER ATTACK IN DISTRICT COURT

Claim That Liquor May Be Brought Into State for Personal Use Without Affidavit

The Oregon prohibition law is under attack in the district court. Attorney Claude Strahan contends that liquor can be brought into the state from California or other commonwealths in any quantity as long as the person goes after it himself and so long as it is for his or her personal use. The question came up in District Judge Jones' court during the case of the state against August Larson, charged with a violation of the prohibition law in that he failed to sign an affidavit when he received liquor from San Francisco which he shipped from there himself as baggage.

The claim, which would annul the prohibition law, is based on the meaning of the word "consignee." Attorney Strahan contends that the word means the person who receives a shipment from another party in another locality, and that a person who brings his own baggage on his ticket is not a consignee.

Oregon Law Considered.

Under the Oregon law, a consignee who receives liquor must sign an affidavit. If a man brings liquor for his own use with him, he is not the consignee, according to Attorney Strahan, and therefore, has to sign no affidavit.

If the court sustains this interpretation of the law, anybody could go to another state and bring any amount of liquor back with them without fear of prosecution. A man could go from here to another state, ship liquor in, send the shipment tag to another person, and the latter could get the liquor. There would be no way of apprehending the person receiving it because the railway companies do not have the name of any person shipping baggage. Deputy District Attorneys Moury and Murphy, who handled the Larson case for the state, said that a man could be prosecuted just the same for receiving more than two quarts of liquor. They also contended that "consignee" would apply to a man who brought in his liquor. They read decisions from other courts to uphold their contention.

Case Under Advisement.

According to the testimony of Fred Peterson, who alleges that he went to San Francisco with Larson, they brought four trunks of whiskey back with them. Larson was charged with receiving liquor without signing an affidavit. Attorney Strahan for the defense, asked that the case be dismissed because "Larson was not a consignee and therefore was not compelled to sign an affidavit."

The case was taken under consideration by Judge Jones. Briefs will be filed and the case will likely be decided within the next two weeks. It asserted that it will be appealed as a test case if decided against the defense.

U. S. MAIL SHORTAGE IS MADE UP BY AN INNOCENT EMPLOYEE

W. A. Crosby, Veteran Clerk, Pays Back $95 Which Fellow Clerk Had Taken.

W. A. Crosby, a veteran mail clerk, paid back the $95 which Arthur V. Kent took from the mails November 29, 1915, the first of a series of thefts which totaled $1742 and resulted in Kent's arrest and confession Sunday.

"Mr. Crosby couldn't have taken that money," said the postoffice inspectors. "He is an honest man."

But the money was missing from Mr. Crosby's sack when it was received from Portland, and he had to make it good.

Working with Crosby when the sack was handled was Kent, and he signed the manifest, witnessing that Crosby had placed the money in the sack for Portland. When Crosby went out on a depot platform to "tap" a mail box, Kent took the letter from the sack.

Kent took $175 in February, and the balance of the total at one haul last June. None of this money has been made good to the government.

"Why did you do it?" asked Inspector C. M. Perkins, when he had confessed, following his arrest by Perkins and Inspector C. B. Welter at the Kent home, 7233 Eighty-second street, southeast.

"I was a fool, that's what," said Kent.

He used part of the money to pay installments on his home, pay bills and send Mrs. Kent and the three children to the beach. About $320 he can account for. He returned $870 to the inspectors.
