

SAM HILL, BACK FROM CIRCLING THE WORLD, SILENT ON GREAT WAR

One Man's Opinion on Outcome as Good as That of Another, He Says.

OPPORTUNITIES ARE SEEN

Russia, in Particular, Is Said to Be a Field Worthy of Cultivation by American Manufacturers.

The outcome of the European war is any man's guess and the opinion of one is as good as that of another.

So says Samuel Hill, who has just returned from a trip around the world. Mr. Hill declined to express his personal opinion. According to his best information, Germany had harvested a good crop, was well supplied with food and was still capable of strenuous action.

As to battlefields, Mr. Hill saw none. The only suggestion of actual combat he witnessed was the appearance of two submarines in the North sea while crossing from Sweden to England.

Feit Trifle Indisposed. "It was the only time on the whole trip," said Mr. Hill, "that I felt the least bit indisposed."

Mr. Hill left Portland June 13 in pursuance of his appointment as honorary consul general of Belgium for Oregon, Washington and Idaho to inquire into reported conditions of Belgium refugees in Japan and Russia. He sailed for Yokohama on the Empress of Russia from Vancouver, B. C., June 15. On his arrival in Japan he found that the Belgian refugees were supporting themselves and not in need of assistance.

From Yokohama, Mr. Hill proceeded to Tsauruga and thence to Vladivostok.

Great Changes in Japan. Speaking of Japan, Mr. Hill said: "I found great changes had taken place within the last two years."

Mr. Hill makes light of the threat of "Yellow Peril," saying that the Japanese everywhere are friendly to Americans. While in Japan he was the guest of Baron Kondo, R. Masujima and Baron Suzuki. He also had a long conference with Baron Kato, the premier of Japan.

Mr. Hill had known these men many years and had great pleasure in renewing old friendships. He also had quite a large tourist travel throughout Japan. Many Americans shut out of Europe by the war were making purchases.

Service to Japan Good. "Travel conditions between this continent and Japan," Mr. Hill said, "are of the best character and the service surpasses anything to be found elsewhere on the high seas."

From Tsauruga Mr. Hill traveled on one of the boats of the Russian Volunteer fleet. At Vladivostok he was received by the government general of the province of Primorsk, or Amur. From there he went direct to Petrograd, where he met his old friend, David R. Francis, the distinguished citizen of Missouri, and one of its former governors who successfully directed the St. Louis exposition. Mr. Francis is now the American ambassador at Petrograd according to Mr. Hill, is doing more than any other man to promote friendly relations with Russia.

Prices Triple in Petrograd. Of conditions in Petrograd, Mr. Hill said: "Prices have increased about three times and the city is full of refugees from eastern Europe and western Asia."

Returning by way of Finland, Lapland, Sweden, Norway, England and France, Mr. Hill had an excellent opportunity to judge of conditions, having friends and acquaintances in all these countries.

"Sweden is distinctly pro-German," said he. "Norway is distinctly pro-ally."

In London Mr. Hill found conditions much changed since he was there last May. The two liveliest cities he found anywhere were Petrograd and New York. There is great activity in Stockholm, owing to the large number of Germans there.

Glad to Get Home. Mr. Hill said he was glad to get back to the United States and that he had found no country in the world like the Pacific coast.

"It was like a breath of heaven," said Mr. Hill, "to have the overland train of about 11 cars stop at Multnomah falls and be told that five minutes would be allowed for passengers to get out and view the scenery."

From the porter of his sleeping car Mr. Hill derived much valuable information regarding the construction of the Columbia river highway.

European Roads Neglected. Owing to the war, the European roads were being neglected because of lack of men to maintain them, Mr. Hill said, and they are getting bad shape. A great deal of reconstruction work will be necessary after the war to restore them. One of the greatest lessons of the war, he continued, is the necessity of good roads for military operations. Their value in facilitating rapidity of movement and concentration of troops and munitions he declared incalculable.

"We should profit by this lesson," said he, "and in our program of national defense at once begin the construction of a highway along our coast line for military and commercial purposes. Suppose, in case of war, our fleet was at the Panama canal and started to repel an attack on the Oregon or Washington coast. A fleet could sail from Japan, for instance, and reach our coast one day ahead of our fleet."

Sees Opportunities in Russia. After the war is over there will be a great opportunity for the development of commercial relations with Russia, in Mr. Hill's opinion, and in this development the Pacific northwest should share. "Russia and the United States have the two greatest areas of food land in the world. It seems strange that we have neglected the development of our relations with Russia. Siberia is a vast, undeveloped empire. Portland should be awake to the opportunities there. Ship lines should be established and a trade built up."

Mr. Hill left for Seattle last night.
