Lillie V. O'Ryan's Painting of Archbishop Termed Art Work of Unusual Interest.

Visitors at the Portland hotel this week who enter by the Broadway doors will be faced at the end of the long arcade of the white parlors by an interesting portrait of Archbishop Christie, from the hand of Lillie V. O'Ryan, the Portland artist.

Even to the layman in matters of art the picture is impressive, partly, perhaps, because of the full canonical robes of lace and royal purple in which the archbishop is posed, and partly because the type of inspired austerity portrayed is somewhat uncommon in contemporary civilization. Analyzed, however, much of the significance of the picture appears to lie in the fact that it is the portrayal of an idea as well as a man.

Expresses Church Militant.

The Archbishop is posed in profile, with the left hand resting on a book which Miss O'Ryan declares to be open at the passage "Thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." At the left of the dim green background is a Botticelli angel, while at the right is a shadowy figure of the prophet Isaiah, so that through the study Miss O'Ryan has striven to express the idea of the function of the church militant on earth.

Portrait painting as Miss O'Ryan does it is no matter of mere external likeness. At various canonical functions in which her subject appeared with greater freedom and variety than would be possible in the studio atmosphere Miss O'Ryan observed Archbishop Christie, until she was ready to place him in his "type," as she does with all her sitters. Before she attempted the final study Miss O'Ryan made five preliminary sketches—one in charcoal, two in pastels and two in oils, the whole work requiring 15 months.

Picture Well Hung.

Lewis Irving Thompson had charge of the hanging and lighting of the picture, which is placed with peculiar effectiveness.

Exhibit of the picture has elicited letters of tribute from many Portland people. Judge Charles H. Carey suggested the purchase of the picture for the city of Portland and this suggestion was taken up and approved by C. E. Wood, Mr. Thompson, M. G. Munly and others.

The portrait is being purchased by popular subscription, amounts varying from $5 to $50 having already been pledged by the following representative Portlanders:

CHANGE IN TERMS OF COMMON PRAYER
BOOK IS ADVOCATED

Question to Come Before the General Convention of the Episcopal Convention.

MODERN IDEA IS SOUGHT

Progressive Churchmen Desire That Liturgy Declare That the Kingdom of God Has Already Come.

By Rev. Frederick K. Howard.

One of the live issues to come before the general convention of the Episcopal church which meets in St. Louis this week is the revision and enrichment of the Book of Common Prayer so that it more nearly voices the aspirations and provides devotions for the activities of the church in the twentieth century.

The aim of the English reformers in 1549, when the Latin service books were translated altogether into English in the First Prayer Book of Edward VI, was to have the services in a "language understood of the people" and this has been the policy of all parts of the Anglican communion since the Reformation.

Accordingly the language of the Prayer Book was intended to voice the aspirations of English Christianity and to provide the devotions expressive of the scope of church activities in the sixteenth century.

Present Needs Considered.

This revision has been practically the Prayer Book in use throughout all parts of the Anglican communion for nearly 600 years. The needs of the present age are demanding a restoration of some of the devotions omitted in the first English Prayer Book and a wider use for the use of certain customs omitted by the reformers.

The reservation of the Blessed Sacrament in our churches and the use of the sacrament of unction for anointing the sick are two examples of which more may be said later.

The vision which inspired the early Christian church has been recovered more and more in modern times until it has made us conscious that the whole church should be as "one sent," that no one may rest so long as any have not the knowledge of God. Only one inadequate prayer is provided for missions, whereas what is needed is that every office of prayer and praise should embody the missionary idea as the chief purpose of the Christian church.

Wider Idea Sought.

The socializing of the church demands the providing in the Prayer Book of social prayers expressing a wider idea than is voiced in the prayers of former generations.

Progressive churchmen desire that the liturgy be enriched with prayers which declare that the Kingdom of God has already come and that God is working His purpose out that man's will and purpose shall become one with the Father's. Inspiring prayers and hymns have been provided in special services which should receive the imprimatur of the church and be incorporated in the Prayer Book.

The assured results of modern scholarship should receive recognition in revision by providing better translations and by eliminations of spurious passages of Scripture.

Needs Provided For.

All the liturgies of western Christendom are tinged with the Roman juridical concept of salvation and with the theology of Augustine of Hippo which render them imperfect vehicles for the modern thought about our relation to God as of Heavenly Father so that there is a demand for incorporation of the ideas and devotions of eastern or Greek Christianity.

Some of these needs and desires are provided for in the report of the commission on revision of the Book of Common Prayer and others are voiced in special memorials to the general convention which may be composed of men big and broad enough to provide for the devotions for "all sorts and conditions of men" that every individual and society may find within its covers some words of prayer and praise that shall help them to worship God not only with the spirit but with the understanding also.

Dayton Considers A City University

"City of Precision" Would Organize Its Facilities Along the Lines of Higher Education.

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 7.—Dayton, "city of precision," has a plan, it is announced, to organize the mechanical personnel now at work on sraphanel timers, computing machines and cash registers, and the city manager form of government, into the Dayton Municipal university. Some thousands of dollars of profits of these concerns will also go into the plan. But before deciding on such an undertaking, a committee of business men is making an intensive survey to learn whether Dayton can afford a university, what success municipal universities in Toledo, Akron and Cincinnati have had, whether educational facilities in the section would overlap, and what should be the legal relations between the proposed university and the Dayton board of education and between such a university and the state superintendent of education.

Challenges City to Give Him a Chance

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 7.—(U. P.)—"Jim Johnson," who admits he has worn prison stripes a good part of his life, arrived in Cleveland today and threw the gauntlet down to the whole city.

"I want a chance to go straight," Jim said, "and I'm here to see whether Cleveland will give me that chance."

"I spent nine years in jail learning to go straight," but they preach the straight road to us guys and then don't never give us a chance when we shake the stripes. I want a job—any kind of a job. Just give me a chance, Cleveland."

Johnson isn't his real name. He is 37 and the pallor of the prison still lingers on his cheeks but he is full of hope.

Jim is challenging Cleveland's humanity. "Jim said, as he started out in search of "that job."

Rickenbacher Also on Goodyear Cords a Close Second

Catapulting along the edge-to-edge board course at Sheepshead Bay Saturday at the rate of 104.66 miles an hour, a world's record for the distance, Johnny Aitken drove his Peugeot to victory in the Astor Cup Race over a field of 31 starters.

He rode on Goodyear Cords!
And he won on Goodyear Cords!

Desperate competitors thundered at his hubs every mile of the way—a treacherous tire might have meant defeat—but he won—his Goodyears did their splendid part.

They stood the burning, tearing, grinding, rending punishment of 250 miles over edge-to-edge boards at a 104.66-mile pace—and victoriously!

Aitken's victory is not an isolated instance of the unflinching stamina of Goodyear Cords. The racing records of the past three months are formidable with additional proof.

Proof, not alone of stamina—though this is paramount—but of speed, spring, and exultant vitality.

Proof of the very qualities that led to the adoption of Goodyear Cord tires as standard equipment on the Franklin, the Packard Twin-Six, the Locomobile, the Peerless, the White, the Haynes Twelve, the Stutz and the McFarlan.

Proof of the qualities that make these tires better.
