

DEATH UNTO PARTY THAT SHALL IGNORE SUFFRAGISTS, IS CRY

Mrs. Boissevain of New York Sounds Campaign Note in Address Aimed at Women.

BANQUET IS A FEATURE

"Test of any Candidate Is What Has He Done for Women," Declares a Speaker at Multnomah Hotel.

"Death to the party that ignores it!" That was the battle cry of Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, voiced at the banquet given in her honor last night at the famed Multnomah hotel by the Woman's party organization in this state.

"The test of a candidate," she said, "is not what he thinks nor what are his issues. It is only this: What has his party done for the women of the nation? There is no other test."

Mrs. Boissevain called all the way from New York to tell the women of Oregon that they would be disloyal to their sisters in the east unless they vote to defeat Wilson.

Credits Is Denied. She praised the child labor law that was enacted by the last congress under the leadership of President Wilson. She praised the Adamson eight-hour law for railroad employes; but she declared President Wilson was entitled to no credit for them from the women of the country, because, she said, they were not supported by him as a matter of principle but of political expediency.

She did not credit the president with sincerity in his stand for protection of child labor, nor for the eight-hour law, nor for his vote for woman suffrage in his home state, when the question was at issue there. She declared he did not decide to vote for equal suffrage until after he knew its chances for carrying in New Jersey were hopeless.

Traveling with Mrs. Boissevain are Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, chairman of the national press committee of the Woman's party, and Mrs. Vida Milholland, sister of Mrs. Inez Boissevain. They arrived in Portland last night at 7 o'clock and left this morning for Seattle.

Banquet Is Feature. The banquet last night, which was one feature of the opening of the Multnomah hotel under a new management, was attended by about 400 men and women—mostly women—and partook of the nature of a society function.

Mrs. Margaret Whittemore, national organizer for Oregon of the Woman's party, was active in making the arrangements, while Mrs. Lewis McArthur was chairman of the general committee. Mrs. Vincent Cook was toastmistress and introduced the speakers. Mrs. Baker preceded Mrs. Boissevain.

Mrs. Baker, disregarding entirely President Wilson's vote for equal suffrage in his home state, declared he was opposed to the federal equal suffrage amendment because of "his innate, instinctive dislike for political equality."

She referred to the fact that the Congressional union, which is identical with the Woman's party, had opposed bringing the federal amendment to a vote in the senate during the last session of congress.

Amendment Was Lost. "Once before, Senator Thomas of Colorado brought the amendment to a hurried vote, and it was lost," she said. "He was going to do it again last spring when he knew it would be lost. Congress had several weeks yet to run, and President Wilson gave the most promising signs of changing his position on the question. So, of course, we did not want it brought to a vote and he lost."

Mrs. Boissevain, in her address, made a plea for the women of the suffrage states to vote together against the president, so the demonstration of their power might be used to club the agronomic party, or any other party, into doing their bidding. She said she did not care if Wilson was re-elected president, just so long as it was not by the votes of the equal-suffrage states.

She said she did not know whether the women could rely on the promises of Hughes, and she did not care, if only they can carry the suffrage states against Wilson as a demonstration of their power.

Referring to the horrors of the European war, she declared that after the war the world will take a different aspect.

Makes Appeal to Women. "The world is to be rebuilt out of the bloody ruins," she said. "In the rebuilding, America will play its part, and if the women are to help reshape the world, they must be included in the national councils."

"Unless the women are satisfied with the world as it has been in the past, you must assert your power. Are you satisfied with the world? I am not. I find too much poverty, too much bloodshed, too much weariness, too many sad-eyed children. I want a world where there is more of peace, of happiness, of justice, and less of despair.

"You women must assert yourselves, if you are to help reshape the world," Mrs. Boissevain is a forceful, magnetic speaker. A lawyer by profession, she presents her arguments clearly and logically. Earnestness is written in every line of her countenance. As she speaks, however, the sternness which one sees in her face is relieved by the frequent flickering of a smile in her steel-gray eyes and at the corners of her mouth. This emphasizes her good looks, an important contribution to which is a mass of dark-brown hair.

Wife's Affections Valued at $50,000

Hoquiam Man Sues Former Friend, Alleging He Broke Up Once Happy Home—Complaint Mailed to Portland

The old, old story of the friend and alienation of the wife's affections is related in a suit filed in the circuit court yesterday by Clarence A. Bean of Hoquiam, Wash. He seeks to get a judgment of $50,000 from Claire S. Williams of Benton county, Or., who, the complaint alleges, is reputed to be worth $200,000.

The complaint was mailed to Portland by a Hoquiam attorney who in an accompanying letter says that the defendant can be served by the sheriff of Benton county either at Corvallis, Philomath or at Skeel's ranch on the Alsea river.

It is not explained why the suit was filed in Multnomah county.

In his complaint, Bean alleges that on November 20, 1912, he was married to Hilda Lind and that their life together was happy until he introduced his friend Williams to his wife. He charges that Williams proved to be a false friend and that the upshot of the affair was a broken home.

Chief Engineer of Forest Service After Field Inspection Finds Idaho and Washington Have Plans Made.

Washington, Oct. 11.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—O. C. Merrill, chief engineer of the forest service, who has just returned from field inspection of national forest roads in the far west, says that Idaho and Washington are the only states fully prepared with their forest funds for cooperation with the government in the construction of roads through or near the national forests under section 8 of the good roads act.

California, he understands, also has the subject well worked out, the engineer in charge of the work being advised in every line of her countenance. As she speaks, however, the sternness which one sees in her face is relieved by the frequent flickering of a smile in her steel-gray eyes and at the corners of her mouth. This emphasizes her good looks, an important contribution to which is a mass of dark-brown hair.

Estimated that one fifth of the water supply would come from a reservoir at Crane Prairie.

If declining to grant the Mohler petition, Assistant Secretary Vogelmann declares that engineering questions principally are involved, concerning which a public hearing would afford little light; that individuals might be permitted to undertake the project at their own expense, but by such a proceeding, and that full and deliberate consideration was given the subject when Director Davis made his decision.

It is stated that there are about 2000 acres of tule or meadow land on Crane Prairie, and a very small part of the prairie could be adapted to agricultural use in any event.

Wilson's Wisdom Is Needed, Is Assertion

W. L. Saunders, Prominent Business Man and Mining Engineer, Says Hughes Is Enigma.

New York, Oct. 11.—W. L. Saunders, chairman of the Ingersoll Rand Drill company, director of the American International Corporation, and an experienced mining engineer, has issued the following statement:

"The new crisis precipitated by the submarine attacks off Nantucket brings forcibly to mind the ever present peril of this country until the war in Europe is entirely over. One of the steps that involve us in the struggle, President Wilson's wisdom is still needed in Washington and conflict is needed until the European war ends."

"This latest submarine attack on our very shores is a striking refutation of the statement of Elihu Root that the United States was never in the point of fact such an assertion is reckless, there have been many times in the past two years when one false move could have precipitated us in the middle of the European horror and the danger was never more present than at this very moment."

"Where Mr. Hughes stands is an enigma. All we know is what Roosevelt, the firebrand, has said for him, and who believes that Roosevelt would not plunge the country into war?"

CRANE PRAIRIE LANDS QUESTION WILL NOT BE REOPENED ANY MORE

Washington, Oct. 11.—The interior department, through Assistant Secretary Vogelmann, has finally refused to reopen the question of excluding lands in Crane Prairie from the Deschutes irrigation project in Oregon.

Swartz and Saunders, Washington attorneys, acting for S. S. Mohler and other Oregon citizens, have been asking for a further hearing in the matter. Director Davis of the reclamation service having in May decided adversely on the request to reopen the subject, after considering detailed affidavits filed by Mohler and his associates.

While being urged on the one hand to consider the question of excluding Crane Prairie from the lands withdrawn in connection with the reclamation project, the Portland Chamber of Commerce has been urging that when new projects in Oregon are started, the first unit of the Deschutes project, which includes the Crane Prairie and Benham Falls developments, shall be the first on the list. Wasco Couple Held Under Auto for Hour

Dr. W. H. Morse and Mrs. Morse in Machine That Goes Over Embankment on Mosier Hill of Highway.

The Dalles, Or., Oct. 11.—After being pinioned beneath their automobile for more than an hour, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Morse of Wasco were rescued Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. Munger, Portland motorists.

Motoring at the top of Mosier hill on the Columbia highway last evening, Dr. Morse's car suddenly skidded, leaped the embankment and turned turtle, holding Dr. and Mrs. Morse beneath it. Desperate efforts to release the couple both were held in painfully cramped positions until passing motorists jacked up the machine and released them.

Mrs. Morse was taken to The Dalles hospital for medical attention. One side of her body was completely benumbed, and she temporarily lost the use of her hand and arm. Dr. Morse was bruised. Mrs. Morse will be confined to the hospital for some time.
