All the tickets were sold by this morning and Mrs. T. C. Burke said she had calls for at least 100 more.

"I am so sorry we did not arrange for the biggest dining room the hotel had," she said. "Maybe we could then have taken care of all those who want to attend."

Mrs. Burke has received a highly interesting telegram from Thomas A. Edison which will be read at the dinner.

Richard Montague will be toastmaster. There will be a number of two-minute talks, and Mrs. Burke has also promised several dramatic surprises.

WILSON WILL CARRY CROOK

Bend Business Men Say Majority Will Be Two to One.

R. M. Smith, head of the R. M. Smith Clothing company, of Bend, and J. D. Donovan, who has charge of the Bend hospital, are business visitors in Portland today and each of them predict that Crook county will go strongly for President Wilson in the November election.

"It is my opinion that Wilson will carry Crook county by a wide margin," Mr. Smith said. "The farmers and the working people, which make up most of our population, are nearly all for Wilson. In a few years Wilson has done it, it would be a mighty funny thing if they were not for him."

Mr. Smith said that Bend is exceedingly prosperous. Good crops have been produced, including the ranches on the high desert land. The town is growing rapidly. He is chairman of the public schools and observes the growth in population by the increase in school attendance. The schools now are 800 pupils and he said he expected the enrollment to reach 1000 before the end of the term.

Mr. Donovan said he knew of many life-long Republicans who are supporting Wilson. He said the Wilson sentiment is growing, particularly ever since Hughes began his campaign speeches attacking the president.

Every dollar that is received for the Woodrow Wilson campaign fund is being put to immediate use. There is no idle surplus waiting for the moment being expended as fast as it is received.

The cost of the campaign is necessarily heavy. Speakers must be sent out over the state, and literature must be distributed so that every voter in the state may have opportunity to inform himself as to the issues.

Reports from all parts of Oregon are encouraging. "In this part of the country, which is always a strong Republican district, the Hughes votes are as scarce as hen's teeth," writes one eastern Oregon contributor to the Wilson fund.

"There have been several straw votes in this vicinity and Wilson is doing well," writes another. "One vote stood 10 to 1 in his favor."

Still another contributor reports: "We had a little straw vote at a picture show last night which gave Hughes 25, Wilson 22, which I think is a good showing considering the registration shows more than 4 to 1 Republican."

Any one who desires to contribute to the Wilson campaign fund will find directions in the coupon below.

TESTIMONY GIVEN BY TEACHERS AGAINST ACCUSED PRINCIPAL

Three Witnesses Are Examined at Hearing Which Involves Mrs. Alexander.

BIG CROWD IS PRESENT

Alleged Friction and Irritation Between Instructors and Chief Reflected in the Testimony.

"I talked with anyone who wished to talk about it. I did not hesitate about voicing my opinion," pertly testified Miss Nora Riley last night in the hearing before the board of education of the charges brought against Mrs. Alecia Alexander by Superintendent Alderman to justify the removal of Mrs. Alexander as principal of the Benson Polytechnic School for Girls.

Only three witnesses were examined. Progress was slow, owing to interchanges of repartee between the attorney for the school board and the introduction of much irrelevant matter. It is reported that a large number of witnesses are still to be heard.

The three who gave testimony last night were teachers in the Benson Polytechnic and their evidence against their former principal was directed towards showing that Mrs. Alexander was not helpful to the teachers under her authority through lack of special knowledge of the different subjects taught and that she did not maintain their respect and confidence and that there was constant friction and irritation.

Would Not Tell Age.
One feature of the examination was the refusal of white-haired Mrs. C. H. Sibbald to give her age when asked to do so by the attorney for Mrs. Alexander.

"I am not telling my age. You can guess it like the others have," said she.

That Mrs. Sibbald had the sympathy of the audience was indicated by the applause her answer evoked.

Miss Lucile Schmitt, teacher of millinery, said that Mrs. Alexander did not know anything about millinery work. She had frequently suggested to Mrs. Alexander, she continued, that it would be well for a principal to know something in a general way about the different subjects taught in order that there might be better cooperation between teacher and principal.

Mrs. Alexander had given her to understand that she did not think it was necessary for the reason that the work of the principal was chiefly executive.

Miss Schmitt asserted that she had difficulty in getting a room for her stock and had complained about the lack of heat in the class room last winter. She felt that she could not go to the principal very often owing to her coarseness and irritability.

"The atmosphere of the school," said Miss Schmitt, "when Mrs. Alexander was there was not conducive to good work."

Was Examination Changed.
Miss Schmitt said Mrs. Alexander commanded her respect and confidence until last winter. What caused a change she could not definitely say, but she thought it was the minor things of little importance in themselves.

One instance occurred last winter when Mrs. Alexander came to sell a downtown store. Some articles which had not been disposed of at a fair, Mrs. Alexander had taken the articles out of her hands, she said, and had the price for them given to others who knew nothing of the cost of the materials.

On cross-examination Miss Schmitt was confronted with one of her personal cards sent to Mrs. Alexander on her return to the city last May upon which Miss Schmitt had written "Welcome home" and an invitation to the party given by the teachers in honor of Mrs. Alexander.

The card was introduced to controvert the statement that Miss Schmitt had lost respect and confidence for Mrs. Alexander last winter.

Nora Riley, teacher of domestic science for the past two years, testified that in her opinion Mrs. Alexander did not know sufficient about her specialty to be of any help to her.

Instance Is Recalled.
In one or two instances her suggestions had been rather to the contrary. For example, trouble had been caused by her wrong direction in the case of a recipe for baking powder biscuits. Mrs. Alexander, she said, had changed the recipe given to the printer, making the recipe call for one-half the amount of baking powder necessary. "She told me she thought that too much baking powder," added Miss Riley.

"I never got any helpful suggestions from her," continued the witness. She did not have my respect. She tried from the beginning to prejudice me against Miss Tingle, belittling her at every opportunity.

Woman Interesting Witness.
An interesting witness was Mrs. C. H. Sibbald, who has been teaching lacemaking the past year in the Benson Polytechnic.

It will be recalled that in an affidavit filed on behalf of Mrs. Alexander Director Smith and Superintendent Alderman were charged with having secured the appointment of Mrs. Sibbald.

According to the story told by Mrs. Sibbald her appointment was not secured through either but was suggested by former Director Munly with whom she had become acquainted through private lessons given his daughter.

As to her relations with Mrs. Alexander she said that she could not get over the feeling that Mrs. Alexander was not in sympathy with her work. She had come to this conclusion by her general manner towards her and by her criticisms made in the presence of pupils. She said she had been reproached by Mrs. Alexander for the respect she, Mrs. Sibbald, had inspired in her class.

very good work and the teachers feel that you are a great help."

Recognized as Expert.
It developed that when Mrs. Alexander made a recent visit to New York she was entertained by Mrs. Sibbald's sister and expressed her appreciation of it to Mrs. Sibbald after her return. Although she had never known Director Smith, Mrs. Sibbald testified that she had become acquainted with his wife and had been her guest at the beach the August before her appointment to a place in the school system.

The hearing will be resumed next Wednesday night.

LITTLE CHANCE FOUND TO SHAVE ESTIMATES FOR STREET CLEANING
Commissioner Daly Had Already Pruned Figure Over $12,000 Below Last Year.

Will H. Daly, commissioner of public utilities, had cut the estimates of the street cleaning bureau in his 1917 budget so low that the city council in its work on his estimate yesterday afternoon found its hands nearly tied when it came to making eliminations.

Commissioner Daly had asked for only $245,510 for running this bureau for 1917 as compared with $258,224 appropriated for the bureau for 1916. With this reduction of $12,714 on Commissioner Daly's part, the other commissioners were successful in lopping off only $446 for supplies and $1527 for gasoline supplies. The item for gasoline was cut owing to a decision of the council to use a mixture of distillate and gasoline in the automobiles and motor apparatus of the street cleaning bureau instead of pure gasoline.

Of the $446 for supplies, $250 was for the purchase of an adding machine, but it was Commissioner Daly who asked that this item be eliminated.

An item of $203,000 for street lighting, the lighting of the city's buildings and parks, was allowed to stand as proposed. This is the same amount as allowed last year, and provides for no additional arc lights.

Commissioner Daly proposed to employ an automobile mechanic for $3.50 a day to look after the seven pieces of motor apparatus in the street cleaning bureau. He explained that with men handling the apparatus during the three shifts of the day, it was almost impossible to fix responsibility for breakage. He said that with one man in charge of the trucks and keeping tabs on the drivers, the responsibility would be fixed and the cars kept in shape. The council took the plan under consideration.

The economy of Commissioner Daly brought forth a facetious comment from Commissioner Baker. When the latter ran across the item referring to the employment of the automobile mechanic at $3.50 a day, he said: "So you're in on the 'raid' on city funds, after all."

"Well, I guess so," laughed Daly. Although Commissioner Daly had insisted nothing in his budget for the purchase of additional snow plows, he suggested that the council appropriate $1020 for the purchase of equipment. Commissioner Dieck thought the suggestion was a good one, but the others turned down the plan.

Thieves Seek Beer; Set House on Fire
Thieves in quest of beer caused indirectly the fire that did about $300 damage to a house owned by Mrs. J. L. Ludesher at 603 East Nineteenth street about 8:15 last night.

The house had been vacated several days before and several dozen bottles of beer and some furnishings had not yet been removed. The beer was in the basement.

Matches scattered about the basement and near the beer caused the fire. The fire had caught in some packing. The roof was burned off. The loss is covered by $500 insurance.

Present Dry Spell Breaks Fall Record
The record for long fall dry spells has gone "floater."

Just 43 days ago today Portland had a real rainstorm.

So far as present indications for rain are concerned it may be 43 more before it rains. There is none in sight, says District Forecaster E. Alden Beals.

In 1896 there was a similar dry spell, the record for which has not been equaled, and tomorrow's promised dry day will break that record.

FRANKLIN STADIUM BUILDING CONTRACT AWARDED BY BOARD

Muir & McClelland Construction Co. Get First Unit; Night Teachers Elected.

At a meeting of the school board yesterday afternoon, Muir & McClelland Construction Co. was awarded the contract for building the first half of the Franklin high school stadium on its bid of $694. A credit of $300 will be given the district.

This action was taken after Thomas Muir had bitterly assailed the board for its methods of doing business. He said that school board work is not in good standing with contractors and that if contracts were not awarded to the lowest bidders few responsible bidders would seek contracts.

The question of using manual training shops of the city schools Saturday mornings was referred to the committee on educational affairs.

The request of the attorney of Mrs. Alecia Alexander for confidential reports of supervisors to be used in the hearing of the charges pending against Mrs. Benson Polytechnic school for girls was denied on the ground that it would be a breach of confidence.

Teachers in night schools were elected by the board as follows: Fred Strickland, machine shop; Frank Stasieles, tool boy; machine shop; F. G. Benson, woodworking shop; George Connolly, plumbing shop; Fred Goldman, assistant, electric shop; Oettinger, assistant, machine shop; E. Law, shop arithmetic; Albert Miller, tool boy; woodworking shop; F. D. Moss, mechanical drawing; William Oettinger, assistant, machine shop; A. Ruhl, electric shop; G. W. Wilder, theory of electricity; E. F. Williams, architectural drawing; George H. Williams, machine shop; Aris Wilson, tool boy, electric shop.

JITNEY FRANCHISE TO BE DRAWN UP; WILL DESIGNATE ROUTES

Heated Discussion in Which Personalities Are Flung Back and Forth, Held.

COUNCIL ROOM IS FILLED

Commissioner Dieck Would Restrict Jitneys to Districts Not Now Served by Street Cars.

A franchise setting forth routes which the jitneys are to follow is to be drafted by Commissioner Dieck and City Attorney La Roche and submitted to the city council for adoption.

Such was the decision of the city council today following a three hours' discussion concerning jitney regulation, participated in by members of the city council, representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, the Progressive Business Men's club and the Chauffeurs' (Jitney) union.

The action means that the routes to be submitted will be for territories not now served by the Portland Railway, Light and Power Co., as Commissioner Dieck has already voiced his views concerning routes and they are to the effect that the jitneys should serve districts not now served by the streetcar company.

Discussion Is Heated.
The discussion was one of the warmest heard in the council chamber in several months. The room was crowded and personalities were flung right and left. Charges were made repeatedly by Arthur I. Moulton, representing the Chauffeurs' union, that the outside clamor for stringent jitney regulation had influenced the council. He referred to actions of the Progressive Business Men's club and those present at the meeting Monday when C. M. Clark appeared in behalf of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company.

The charges were hotly denied by members of the council and once Commissioner Bigelow asked that the privilege of the floor be no longer extended to Mr. Moulton.

Resolutions calling upon the council to adopt regulations which would place the jitneys on a parity with the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, adopted by the Progressive Business Men's club and a committee representing the Portland Chamber of Commerce were submitted to the council. W. F. Woodward and C. W. Hodson spoke for the Chamber of Commerce and F. T. Richards for the Progressive Business Men's club.

Daily Benefits Jitneys.
In a report to the council Commissioner Daly stated that the jitneys were desirable and that to require them to go into territory not now served would be the means of putting them out of business. He said that the jitneys now handled thousands during the rush hours which the streetcars cannot carry.

"This class of service," concludes the report, "should be maintained."
