

FRANZ JOSEF—TO BE BURIED IN VAULT OF OLD CAPUCIN CHAPEL

Crypt No. 133 Will Hold Body of the Late Austro-Hungarian Emperor.

OLD CUSTOMS FOLLOWED

Funeral to Be Carried Out With All of Regal Show and Pomp of Medieval Court Custom.

London, Nov. 30.—(U. P.)—Crypt No. 133 in the vault of the age-darkened chapel of the Capucin Fathers in Vienna will tonight hold the mortal remains of the late Emperor Franz Josef of Austria-Hungary. Dispatches from Vienna today said preparations for the funeral were being completed with all the regal show and pomp of medieval custom that the rigid etiquette of the most formal court in the world permits.

Customs to Be Followed. The emperor's last resting place is a short three blocks distant from the ancient Hofburg state palace, through crooked, narrow streets, in some places less than 10 feet wide.

At 4:30 today precisely the deep throated tones of the giant bell in the 460 foot steeple of St. Stephen's church, mingling with scores of others, will announce the termination of the formal ceremonial in the Hofburg Augustiner church of "Blessing the Imperial Dead" and beginning of the march to the grave.

Many Notables to Attend. In that processional will be representatives of all of Austria-Hungary's allies and one of the greatest gatherings of royalty since the death of Queen Victoria of England.

The one notable absentee will be Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, who left Vienna yesterday on strict orders of his physician. The German emperor had a bad cold but notwithstanding had come to the Austrian capital for the funeral. His physician, however, ordered that he leave the damp climate at once.

members of German royalty in Vienna, however, and Cesar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, the Crown Prince Boris and Prince Cyril of that same country, the Turkish crown prince, Wahid Eddin, Prince Alfonso de Bourbon of Austria, Infanta Dona Maria Delos Nieves and the Crown Prince Gustav Adolph of Sweden. These joined in the funeral procession with a resplendent guard of honor.

British Labor Plans To Consider Peace

London, Nov. 30.—(I. N. S.)—Nine resolutions dealing with peace will be introduced at the annual conference of the Labor party which will open in Manchester on January 23.

The resolutions deal with the relationship of labor and capital and the problems which will face the working people after the war has been discussed at length. Radicals among the labor leaders are preparing to attack the government on account of the increased cost of living and the food shortage.

United States Is Greatly Blessed Has Much to Be Thankful For

This Country Most Fortunate in Her Great Educational and Religious Forces.

Rev. Dr. Joshua Stanfield.

Dr. Joshua Stanfield, pastor of First Methodist church, addressed one of the largest interdenominational assemblies ever brought together in a Portland church today. The occasion was the Thanksgiving service held jointly in the White Temple by the First Methodist, First Baptist, First Christian and First Congregational churches.

Dr. Stanfield's sermon in full was as follows: "Blessed is that people whose and the Lord's. This observation by one of the old Testament seers has passed into a world aphorism. It is one of the truths of life, so easily accepted that it is meaningless to many. Any truth too easily accepted and held is worth little. A religious faith that never cost a struggle is not a living faith, it never lives for much."

blind me to the fact that Woodrow Wilson has been and is of the highest and finest type of a true American. Intelligent, humane, peace loving, poised, and strong in the consciousness of the right. When in the growing heat of recent political controversy some whom we could ill thought would have done so, and in more sober moments they never would have maligned and wrong spoken him, it grieved me and many good Americans much. It was with reactionary purposes of the last campaign, Woodrow Wilson, a Presbyterial Christian man and a true American, Charles Hughes, a disciple Christian and a noble true American. J. Frank Hanly, a Methodist and member of my own church for 10 years past, a true American. Whoever of these three justice and peace loving men had been chosen the nation would have fared well, and it is not at all improbable that our present national policy of strict neutrality with purpose against every organized and education and philanthropy and self government and freedom and temperance and religion and generosity and good will all in and by, and large man in any country on earth. With all our sins, and they are many, and our faults, and they are grievous, America is a people whose "God is the Lord. Blessed is that people."

America's Door Always Open

"America is a nation whose God is the Lord." Our antecedents, our history, our ideals—are for liberty, justice, righteousness and peace. Jingoism and true Americanism are more than a paradox, they are a contradiction. "Our God" is the father of all men of whatever nation or race or color. Because of this fact we believe that all men have God given and inalienable rights among which are "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." This is why America has always had the open door, and the thrill cry of recent years, in some places—"America for Americans"—has been a squeak and a squall rather than the true ring of the American people. Who is the American? Is Americanism of birth, choice, or both? It may be either, or neither or both? True Americanism is a spirit, a temper, a purpose. The liberty-loving and liberty-giving self governing patriotic man or woman, whether native born or voluntarily here, is the true stuff for an American. And neither your sectional politicians, nor labor union extremists nor any others who glibly parrot catchy phrases and beguile the unwary and inflame the unthinking to the rankest kind of un-American conduct, will ever change the fundamental facts and forces of real and true Americanism.

The noble symbol of Columbia in New York harbor "Liberty among the world," will only be realized as America holds true to her deepest and highest self and her best traditions and laws. We are soberly or we are intemperate, and the intoxication of a world wide standard of "Preparedness," inflaming us, we had needs think care full of our peace that we shall forfeit both our peace and our power as an example and a help for permanent peace for all the nations.

The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, gentleness and assurance forever." America's best preparedness would be in a wider and truer justice, industrial, economic, social, national, international. There is possibly something better for America among the nations than a precarious balance of trade and some preferentials.

America Greatly Blessed. On the 30th anniversary of America's national resources—in her rich harvests and crops, the reports and the prices are almost fabulous—in her marked prosperity in most parts of the nation—maybe—possibly war profits are a species of blood money which is never good money. But America is blessed most of all in her educational and benevolent and social and moral and religious institutions and forces. We may truly say, "God hath not dealt so with any people."

There is today in this good land of America, more of prosperity and peace and education and philanthropy and self government and freedom and temperance and religion and generosity and good will all in and by, and large man in any country on earth. With all our sins, and they are many, and our faults, and they are grievous, America is a people whose "God is the Lord. Blessed is that people."

PROGRESSIVE POLICY ADOPTED AT SESSION OF NATIONAL GRANGE

Popular Election of President and Vice President Is Reported as "Inexpedient."

SPENCE FATHERED MOVE

Oregon Man Also Proposed Government Ownership of Railroads Which Was Lost by Big Vote.

Washington, Nov. 30.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL).—The national grange in its sessions here voted on resolutions on a broad range of subjects. Western members, prominent among whom were C. E. Spence of Oregon and C. B. Kegley of Washington, urged declarations of progressive policy on a large number of topics, in some of which they succeeded, and in others failed.

Mr. Spence fathered two of the more radical propositions which were defeated. One was a declaration in favor of the election of president and vice president by direct popular vote, the other a resolution favoring the government ownership of railroads.

Government Ownership Barred. The resolutions committee reported that it was "inexpedient" to adopt the declaration in favor of direct vote for president and vice president. The idea found considerable support and, after a vigorous debate, the majority against it was not large. The government ownership resolution was buried by a decided vote.

Among the resolutions adopted were the following: Favoring woman suffrage. Favoring national prohibition; restriction of Federal license in dry states, and inclusion of the District of Columbia in national prohibition legislation. Opposing an embargo on the products of the soil. Condemning free seed distribution by members of congress. Indorsing the rural credits system, and commanding John Skilton Williams, comptroller of the currency, for placing money for moving crops in the banks of the west and south. Indorsing the Torrens system of land registry. Condemning compulsory military training in the public schools. Favoring legislation for wider development and use of denatured alcohol. Favoring increase of the surtax on large incomes as a method of raising revenue. Admiration Bill Passed By. Favoring state and municipal milk distributing agencies and municipal slaughter houses. Condemning the inclusion in railroad capitalization for rate-making purposes of lands granted to the railroads. Favoring a congressional investigation into the meat packing industry. A resolution condemning the Adams-on railroad bill was laid on the table after a spirited debate. Register in your mind "The Song of Songs" (Adv.)

What Kind of Construction Should Go Into My New Home?

Having been in real-estate activities for many years, we naturally have had experience with all kinds of construction—good, bad and indifferent.

With our new policy of merchandising our properties, we determined on one rigid rule, that, wherever it was our privilege to aid a client in the construction of a home, we would urge the highest standard of work.

By that we do not advise to "bury gold unseen," but if you lavish expenditure "where it shows" at the expense of honest inner-construction, the deterioration within five or ten years will be so great as to demand expensive and continuous improvements.

The advantage of right construction should always be considered worth while. This is especially important where a house is to be built on terms, for you most certainly want your home in the best condition when your last payment is made and the property is free from all claims under the loan.

Look Up! Look Up! The Industrial. Look over the annals of history and we know of no one great person who has attained high eminence and maintained it, who has left a name behind him, who has done anything great, who has done anything good. Joseph in Egypt, Daniel in Babylon, Gladstone in England, Washington and Lincoln in America, mountain climbers in the Alps, and as they scale the dizzy heights with yawning chasms beneath them the leader will call back to them "Look Up! Look Up!" It is dangerous to look otherwise. So too in the dangerous heights of place and power thousands are lost because they do not "look up." Religion is far more than a matter of mere superstition; it is fundamental to safety for every rational life. So too in the family; the largest asset for a good and perceptive family is its godliness. Wesley, Beecher, others—it took several generations of fine moral stock on both sides of the family to produce a man of such a family name as Wesley. We gather here today as a part of a national Thanksgiving. In accordance with an age long custom, and at the call of a Christian president of the greatest of all republics, we meet for a nation's thanksgiving and why? Because notwithstanding a thousand contrary facts, America is a people, whose God is the Lord. God is the Lord, and born of moral and religious convictions. Her institutions and best national life are founded thereon, and she has been cultured by the best and strongest thereby. Think of the men who laid the foundation of our republic; not alone Puritans for England, but men of like spirit and moral and religious convictions from Holland and France and Germany and the Netherlands and the sturdiest and best of central Europe. Liberty-loving and freedom seeking people were those of the "thirteen little republics by the sea."
