Bed Time Tales

The South Wind's Way. LL night long the north wind howled—howled and howled through the old pine trees.

"If you please, Mr. North Wind, couldn't you stop blowing for a few minutes? We're really very tired and you keep shaking and twisting us so we can hardly get our breath."

"No, I can't stop," said the North Wind, crossly. "This winter time is my time, and I can blow all I please."

"But, like most everybody else in the world, he gets cross at times, and this night was one of the cross times."

"I believe that my work in an executive capacity in connection with large projects during the past 14 years fit me for the duties of a Portland city commissionership," said Mr. Laurgaard.

He was engineer of the state built Tumalo irrigation project, the only one of the kind ever undertaken by any state in this country, and succeeded in completing the project in the original estimates of cost.

Mr. Laurgaard was born 37 years ago in Norway, was brought by his parents to the United States where he lived in La Crosse, until he came to Oregon in 1902. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, in the civil engineering course.
