River Boat Runs Into Submerged Obstruction Above Carson, Wash.

OFFICERS AND CREW SAFE

Damage Sustained Is Reported Slight; Plans Already Made to Remove

Striking a submerged rock one mile above Carson, Wash., in the upper Columbia river, the stern-weel passenger and freight steamer Tahoma was partially sunk at 11:30 o'clock last night. The captain and crew remained aboard the boat. The bow of the craft remained out of water, the stern beng partially submerged. Water tered the engine room, but the fires were not put out, The accident occurred when the boat was making her regular run from Hood Reports from the local offices of the People's Navigation company at the foot of Pine street, owners of the boat, said today that the craft was not seriously damaged and that efforts to rescue her would be made as soon as Information stated that the mishap took place at Dalles City rock. Captain C. Nelson was in charge of the steamer. Captain Nelson arrived down this morning and, with Mat Saunders, agent for the line is makthe promoters say. As it stands the plant represents an original investment for its eight acres of ground, buildngs and machinery of about $300,000. on account of unfavorable conditions of the markets for mohair, the concern closed down about three years ago and has been idle ever since.

About six months ago J. A. Zehntbauer, president of the Portland Knitting company, realizing the necessity of a worsted yarn spinning plant on this coast, began an investigation of the mohair mills with a view of transforming them into such an institution It was found that this could be accomplished at very little expense, once the plant had been secured, hence an option was taken and last month a corporation, capitalized as $350,000, was dication that the new industry will replace the old.
