World Grain Crops Materially Lower

Washington, March 21.—(I. N. S.)—With foodstuffs daily soaring to new heights, the world's production of wheat and corn for 1916-1917 will be materially lower than in previous years, according to advices received by the agricultural department today from the international institute of agriculture in Rome. In Argentina, Australia and New Zealand, three of the largest wheat producing centers in the world, the crop is only 70 per cent of last year's. The corn crop in foreign countries is similarly off from 2 to 14 per cent.

Woman Named Postmistress.

Washington, March 21.—Mrs. Olive J. Cannon has been appointed postmistress at Klamath Falls, Jackson county, Oregon, in place of William N. Staub, resigned.

Klamath Granted Lower Hay Rate

Klamath Falls, Or., March 21.—An emergency hay rate of 80 cents per hundred from Portland and Willamette points is declared effective April 1, according to a proclamation issued by General Freight Agent J. G. Stubbs of the Southern Pacific company at San Francisco. The above rate was petitioned for by the Klamath County agricultural club ten days ago to relieve the hay shortage brought on by the severe winter. The rate was granted immediately by the interstate commerce commission and it is believed has just been confirmed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Fields of Fragrant Flowers.

WE travel sometimes a long way in a fruitless search for things that could be found under the roots of our own homes.

In the winter rich persons travel south and in the summer they move northward. Some search for pleasure and others look for health, but in many instances they desire something that could be found much nearer home. A change in the air is not always what we need to see new faces and different scenes. We cannot travel in a rut and keep up our interest in life. Our minds are weary and our bodies are weary. We need at least temporary relief from the demands of society. You will find business and work hard masters if you associate too intimately with them. We all need periods of rest and change whether we are engaged in business or as housewives.

I met a woman the other day who was in the midst of a pleasing experience. She had gone through a busy

INDIAN WAR VETERAN PENSION ACT MAKES LIBERAL ALLOWANCES

Long-Delayed Hopes Are Realized on Terms Much Better Than Seemed Possible.

CAMPAIGNS ENUMERATED

Wars in Northwest, Including Mes Perce and Modoc, Included in List Furnished in Bill.

Washington, March 21.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—The Indian war veteran pension act, which was signed by President Wilson on March 4, realizes the long-delayed hopes of the survivors of the Indian wars and their widows, on terms much more liberal than at one time seemed possible.

Survivors who had proof under this act will receive $20 a month and widows $12 a month. Service for at least 30 days must be shown in any one of the campaigns and was enumerated in the list within specified days, and the pensioner must be at least 62 years of age.

Among the campaigns enumerated in the act are the wars in Oregon and northern parts of California and Nevada from 1855 to 1863 inclusive; the Modoc war of 1872 and 1873, and the Nez Percé war of 1877.

Proof of service will be made from war department or treasury department records, where they exist, and if not shown there, it may be proved by evidence from the muster rolls on file in the general state or territorial archives.

Lack of a certificate of discharge will not operate to prevent allowance of pension, it is provided.

If any campaign named in the bill is officially determined to have lasted less than 30 days, service through the entire campaign of a lesser number of days entitles to pension.

All contracts made with pension attorneys and claim agents before passage of the act are declared null and void.

The Woman in the Moon.

OF COURSE, you know the story of the "Man in the Moon," who came down too soon, but have you ever noticed the old woman in the moon?

If you have, you will want to know the ancient Indian legend of who she is and how she came to be in the moon.

Once upon a time in the tribe of Algonquins, there live a wise old medicine woman.

She knew everything about every herb that grew, and every cure for all kinds of ailments that came to her for advice.

She knew everything about every star in the heavens, and people came to her to find out what would happen in the future, and she could tell them all.

In fact, she was so wise that she knew everything there was to know on the whole earth, except one thing—she didn't know when the world would end!

But the one thing she didn't know worried her more than all the things she did know, and she was continually asking the Great Spirit to tell her when the world would end.

Now, the Great Spirit grew tired of her questions and sent a Manitou to tell her to stop.

"Go tell the Great Spirit," answered the old woman, "that when this head-bud I am working on is finished I will stop asking you questions."

So the Manitou carried the reply and the Great Spirit said: "Tell the old woman I will tell her when she is finished with her head-bud. And tell her she must leave the earth. For I tell her, for if she stays among people she will be sure to tell my most wonderful secret."

So the four winds blew her up to the moon.

The old woman smiled wisely when she heard the Great Spirit's answer; then she called the four winds to her. "Blow me up to the moon," she said, "for soon I am to be wise above all people."

So the four winds blew her up to the moon, and there she sits, still working on the head-bud that is never finished. For as fast as she works a few stitches the cat in the moon pulls them out.

And every night when the moon is full you can see her—forever asking, forever unanswered, for the weaving is never done!

Tomorrow—Fairies and the Marble King.

HOW MANY WOMEN ARE YOU? How many women are you? You can't just be one any more and get away with it. At least you can't from the feminist point of view.

"When a woman has captivated a man with a life-long fascination," writes Ellen Key in her feminist tract, "Love and Marriage," "the secret has been that she has never exhausted her; that she has not been one, but a thousand."

To be a thousand women in one—to come to the breakfast table every morning for high noon three years, a different creature each day, is a very difficult achievement for even a woman of superior capabilities, I should say. Perhaps it is one of the reasons, this difficulty, why so few men are captivated with life-long fascinations.

Though we may not agree with many of this "new" woman's very radical ideas, she has hit the nail on the head in her penetration of sex. All women, however, have an inkling of it. Does not their passion for new clothes and more new clothes prove it?

Women dress for men—all contentions to the contrary. Few clever women disregard the importance of becoming clothed through radical ideas. To be added, that by the same token, the cleverer the woman the less she should be dependent upon dress to "put across" her variability.

To the woman, however, who has it not in her power "to be all things to all men, clothes are a powerful help. Gathered in velvet, though they could not achieve an impressive staidness? And the next day, given the aid of a sports suit and tailored blouse, would it be difficult to achieve a complete transformation of personality? Add to this clinging raiment for clinging modes, forbidding garters and taffetas and brocades for remote whims, tinsel and spangles for the capricious, scintillant frames of mind, dull blacks for introspective, meditative poses, baby blues and pinks and immaculate whites for one in feeling young and foolish, and almost any woman could be as different as a chameleon. But few women can afford so comprehensive a wardrobe, and must therefore, unless they have naturally barometrical temperaments to depend upon, content

PLAIN POUND CAKE Beat 1/2 pound of butter in an earthen dish until it is like a fine, thick cream, then beat in 9 whole eggs till quite light. Put in a glass of brandy, a little lemon peel shaved fine, the work in 1/4 pounds of flour. Put into a pan and bake one hour. A pound plum cake is made the same by putting in 1 1/2 pounds of clean currants and 1/2 pound of lemon peel.

POTATO SALAD This is enough for two. Take two good sized boiled potatoes, cut in cubes, as much celery, the same; a suspicion of onion if you like it. Marinate with boiled dressing 15 minutes before serving. Just before sending to the table add, piled on top, two hard boiled eggs put through the fine part of meat grinder. Sprinkle generously with salt; serve with lemon or not. I like lemon on all my salads.
