BISHOP SUMNER TELLS OF GOOD SAMARITAN'S PURPOSES AND NEEDS

Review Is Given in Delivering Address to the Graduating Nurses at Hospital.

INSTITUTION IS BIG ONE

Only Two of Denomination's Hospitals in Country Larger; Lack of Endowment Hampers Work.

Something of the Good Samaritan hospital, its objects and needs, aims and accomplishment, was succinctly told by Bishop Sumner in an address given at the nurses' graduation exercises of the hospital, Thursday night. Bishop Sumner said in part:

The primary object of a hospital is to care for the sick. Everything in connection with a hospital is secondary to this—all else must be sacrificed for this—first, the patients' comfort and happiness; second, efficient care, and third, all preventative and remedial measures studied and carried out to bring them back to health and strength. Often times rules and regulations seem irksome and unnecessary to the uninitiated; but to those who are in the closest touch with hospital organization the necessity is very apparent.

Protects Public Health.

The second object of the hospital is to protect the public health. It is hard to measure how great would be the general sickness in this community were it not for the hospitals, which minimize the general conditions of ill health by isolating sufferers. As a general educational institution in public health it is unsurpassed.

Thirdly, to care for the sick, there must be men and women carefully trained and the hospital offers this opportunity.

The first group is the physicians and surgeons. Every hospital should be a training school for the physician, giving him technical and scientific experiences and providing him with the knowledge of his science and profession. This, the Good Samaritan does in connection with the University of Oregon Medical school.

Short Course in Advised.

The second group is that of the nurses. I have no sympathy with those who, through a mistaken idea of patriotism, are advancing the theory that young women with all good intentions, may become nurses through some sort of a short course of two or three months, giving them the right to wear the uniform of a nurse and calling themselves such.

The Good Samaritan training school for nurses points with pride to the splendid type of nurses which it has graduated these many years in Portland, and no greater tribute could be paid to it than the fact that, year after year, the educational standard has been raised and yet the waiting list of those who desire to enter the school is gradually increasing.

It is quite a pertinent question to ask: How well is the Good Samaritan hospital meeting the demands which the community is making upon it?

Is Third Largest.

Today, of the 50 or 60 church hospitals under the control of the Episcopal church in this country, the Good Samaritan stands third in size—New York and Chicago being first and second. That it has not reached its highest growth nor height of efficiency is recognizable by us all, and is hampered by lack of endowment.

However, for the last few years, it has been able to add considerably to its equipment in the way of new surgeries, conveniences for the patients, a pathological laboratory and other needed important equipment. Its needs, however, are still many, and it is hoped that the citizens of Portland, recognizing these needs, will, of their generosity, assist the hospital.

This may be done first, by building a new wing to take the place of the present old one, thereby enlarging the capacity and providing certain modern features, and second, the building of a maternity building on the present site. A convalescent home is much needed and possibly, too, will be supplied.

Is Preparing for War.

In these days of preparedness the Good Samaritan hospital has not been idle. Plans are being considered for the erection of temporary buildings in the park in front of the hospital, should there be need of additional accommodations to care for the wounded, incident to active war conditions.

In addition, our surgeries and our wards have been thrown open to young men who have been endeavoring to enlist for the defense of their country, but who have not been accepted because of the need of minor operations. Scores and scores have been and are now passing through our hospital and are being cared for, whether or not they can pay for such operations. In this way the hospital is doing its bit in patriotism in the interest of preparedness.

That there is a need for the Good Samaritan hospital, that the need is being met reasonably and efficiently, is simply demonstrated by the fact that a fact which may be applied to any business, whether it be altruistic or purely monetary—that the hospital has been constantly crowded to overflowing, necessitating extra beds in all available rooms and even corridors and the demand continues for larger accommodations to care for those who are seeking admission.

I bespeak for the hospital your earnest support, your constant interest and your gifts. It is worthy in a more efficient organization and successful condition. Portland may well be proud of an institution which has been for so many decades a boon to suffering humanity and an object of pride as an institution of the city of Portland.

Quality of School Service Is Attacked

That although school district No. 67, near Peak, Lincoln county, possesses a schoolhouse, the eight pupils within the district if they go to school at all are compelled to go into another district eight miles away, is a complaint reiterated by P. S. Frye. Mr. Frye lives in that district and has children of school age. It is said that during the past four years there has been but approximately nine months of school held. Lack of a teacher was given as a reason, it is said, and now the school is kept closed because of needed repairs. The complaints allege that dilatory tactics are maintained by some opposed to the opening of the school.

An important clearance TRIMMED HATS $3.95

—When the Millinery Chief decides on a clean-up of hats he means just that. Hats must go. That's why this lot of hats is marked as low as $3.95. And they're sure to go flying if we are any judges of values and styles. There are small hats and large ones—the most approved shapes and garnishings in all sorts of colors. You'll be surprised and delighted when you see them at $3.95.
—Third Floor, Lipman, Wolfe & Co.

9x12 Wiltana RUGS $35

—Rugs that have much of the beauty of colorings and patterns that characterize the higher-priced ones and then of quite as much importance is the serviceability of these Wiltanas.

—P. S.—For the information of those who don't know Wiltanas, let us say they are velvets and they come in both Oriental and conventional patterns! Unusual values at $35.00.
Fifth Floor—Lipman, Wolfe & Co.

Curtain madras 19c

—It's real Scotch madras, a full yard wide, that would be priced at much more than this is except for the fact that the curtain buyer bargained for a special lot, and got it at way below market price!
Fifth Floor—Lipman, Wolfe & Co.

Another lot of those wonder SUITS at $25.00

—At the beginning of this season we set out to specialize on $25 suits! We set a high standard—one that made the manufacturers gasp when we made it known to them! You may be sure that there were plenty to tell us "it can't be done," etc., etc.—but we went ahead just the same—and in the face of the extraordinary market conditions which existed we found better suits to sell at $25 than we had ever had—better suits than we have ever heard of any store—anywhere—selling for $35.

—Come and see these wonder suits of ours—look through them inside and out—then compare them with other $25 suits—you'll understand our enthusiasm!

—Many of the suits that will go into Monday's offering will not be unpacked until after this advertisement is sent to press, so we will attempt no description. You may rest assured, though, that all good fabrics and colors are included.

New wash sport SKIRTS like the pictures above $3.98

—Many of the most attractive ones are in pure white—others are in new sports patterns and colorings, copies of the high-priced sports silks.
—Besides the three styles pictured there are fully a dozen others—some of cotton gabardine—and some of novelty weaves that are too new to have names—

New COATS will be featured in a special way at $22.50

—They're not just coats—there is something about these that takes them far away from the ordinary class! There are models for motor wear—for traveling wear and for street wear. They are tailored from shower-proof English mixed tweeds in tans and gray with belts and convertible collars!
—Third Floor, Lipman, Wolfe & Co.
