OBJECTION IS RAISED TO SEPARATE CONTROL OF AVIATION IN WAR

War and Navy Departments Jointly Will Draft Administration Bill for Air Fleet.

SPECIAL BOARD OPPOSED

Secretaries Baker and Daniels Insist Authority Over Construction and Persound Must Rest With Them.

Washington, June 26 .- (I. N. S.) The war and navy departments jointly will draft the administration's $600,-000,000 bill for a gigantic air fleet for service on the western front. This decision was reached Monday night, following the hearing before the senate sub-committee on foreign relations, upon the proposal to establish a separate department of aeronautics to execute the government's program.

The administration measure will be brought before the senate sub-committee when the hearing is resumed Wednesday. Senator Sheppard, chairnan of the sub-committee, announced that prompt consideration will be giv on to the measure and every possible effort made to expedite a report to the ommittee with a view to speedy action by the senate.

The aircraft bill will be dratted by Brigadier General George O. Squier of the signal corps of the army, and Rear Admiral David Taylor, head of the bureau of construction of the navy. Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Navy Daniels were the rincipal witnesses before the Sheppard committee and vigorously objected to the independent aeronautial department proposal. Daniels believed the creation of such a department at this time would be a most radical" wartime step.

"The air service should not be separate and distinct in one government branch any more than the project of constructing automobiles and mine layers should be separate from the navy department," said Secretary Dan-

War Secretary Amplifies Statement Secretary Baker amplified Secretary Daniels' statement and added that he saw no reason for lodging authority for aircraft building in a separate branch, but believed the program could be more successfully worked out along lines now being followed by the army

Both secretaries agreed that coordination in the perfection of the mammoth program has been demonstrated by the aviation branches of both departments. They believed it might be wise for congress to delegate to the aircraft production board of the council of national defense power to supervise the production of battleplanes and other air equipment in conjunction with the war and navy departments. The two departments, they said, desired particularly to have complete authority over the personnel phases of the entire program. The drafting of the personnel section of the bill will offer a solution of the problem of joint authority of the army and navy over aircraft.
