

AMATEURS SCORE HIT IN PRESENTATION OF THE SULTAN OF SULU

Funmakers and Chorus Open Show With Dash and Finish That Wins From Start.

PRETTY WOMEN IN CAST

Mayor-Elect Baker Sells Candy in Audience and Yells Signal for Big Show to Start.

Clever in song and wit the Elks benefit performance of the "Sultan of Sulu" at the Eleventh Street playhouse Thursday night won the praises of professionals. Mayor-elect George L. Baker sold candy in the audience and at the proper time yelled out, "All right, let 'er go." With that the curtain went up and the scintillating stars, funmakers and chorus opened the show with a dash and finish that made many people in the house look in wonder.

The first idea that struck the beholder was the excellence of the chorus. The next feature was the bevy of pretty women, the select of whom were the Misses of the sultan. Miss Grace Dawson had the role of the principal wife and she proved herself worthy as an entertainer in her rendition of the song, "My Heart in Your Lonesome Eyes." Lieutenant Hardy (Warren A. Erwin) then sang "Hike" in a most pleasing manner. Mrs. Herman Politz, as Henrietta, won rounds of applause, her bell-like voice winning a ready place in the appreciation of the audience. George Hotchkiss Street was the sultan, himself. His first vocal adventure was in the "Smiling Isle of Sulu," which was generously received.

A bevy of school teachers depicted by Miss Roxbury, Miss Dorchester, Miss Cambridge and Miss Newton, followed with a pretty song and dance which earned repeated curtain calls. Miss Wilberta Babbidge, a student of Ruth St. Denis, captivated with her oriental dance. Mrs. Politz and Mr. Erwin won again in their duet, "Engaged in a Sort of a Way." Mr. Erwin scored a third time in "If I But Knew."

The second and last half of the program was featured by a choice collection of songs and dances. Frances Hanrahan executing the swan dance with dexterity. The duet dance by Mentrose Kinkler and Miss Hanrahan was artistic and graceful. Miss Drain starred in a catchy piece entitled "Ching Song," the support coming in for a share of the honors. The sultan, with head bandaged up, made a mournfully humorous ditty about a dour town that made a hit with W. H. Frost, the stern colonel, showed to advantage with his deep rich voice and his admirable stage presence. Historic abilities of Mrs. Herbert Gann Head were capably proved. Charles Rinkler, as the sultan's private secretary, carried the part in uproarious manner, his humor being natural and sidesplitting.

Telegraph Operators Needed at the Front

Salem, Or., June 29.—That many up-town offices of the Western Union Telegraph company in the smaller cities and towns will have to be closed in order to provide telegraph operators for the government service, is the assertion made to the Oregon Public Service commission by I. N. Miller, Jr., of Seattle, district commercial superintendent for the company. The company proposes to close its up-town office at Tillamook and have the business handled by the operator at the railroad depot. The citizens of Tillamook made objections to the public service commission, and the information given by Mr. Miller is in reply to a query from the commission. He pointed out that the government is calling for operators for the signal service, and that operators will be needed at the mobilization camps.

AUDITOR UNABLE TO LEARN ALL WHO SPENT MONEY ON ELECTION

Those Who Are Known and Who Have Not Filed Statements Notified to Do So.

Although a number of persons and organizations spent large sums in behalf of candidates and measures in the recent city election, City Auditor Harbur has been unable to learn who they were, according to a statement by him today, and as a result it is probable that few statements of campaign expenditures will now be forthcoming.

Harbur declared that he had notified all whom he knew to have spent money in the campaign. Letters have been sent to George S. Sizer, who backed the Shepherd anti-commission charter, and to the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., which fought the interchange of telephone service measure, requiring that they file immediately.

"If those who have been notified fail to file their statements under the corrupt practices act by tomorrow, I shall place what information I have in the hands of the district attorney," declared Harbur.

J. J. Sayer, representing the fire protection committee which carried on a campaign against the firemen's two-plateau measure, filed a statement today showing that $1949.50 was expended in advertising.

Conrad Helzer, representing the Portland Garbage Collection association, which fought the municipal garbage collection measure, filed a statement showing that $350 was spent by his association.

Dan Kellaker's statement shows that $276.50 was expended in his campaign for commissioner.

MILITARY HIGHWAY ON COAST IS ARGUED AS AN IMPORTANT NEED

L. J. Simpson of North Bend and R. W. Emerson Address Defense League.

WOULD COST $35,000,000

Roadbed Capable of Sustaining Transportation of Guns Weighing 54 Tons Needed Along Coast.

At a meeting of the Pacific Coast Defense League, Thursday evening, L. J. Simpson of North Bend, president of the association, and R. W. Emerson of Seattle, secretary, discussed the advantages of a coast military highway as a measure of defense for the Pacific coast.

The league was formed for the promotion of defense measures for the Pacific coast. A military highway from the northern boundary of Washington to the southern boundary of California is held to be a military necessity. It is pointed out that such a road could be constructed by the government at a cost of $35,000,000. The route of such a proposed road would be chosen by the war department.

The chief aim of the league is to create a sentiment for the highway among the people of the coast. Two routes have been suggested by the military engineers at Washington; the all coast or Balboa route, and the Pacific highway route. The Pacific highway route is the favored road with the exception of a slight deviation to avoid winter snows.

The need for such a road is self-evident, the speaker said. For heavy traffic of military necessity, the Pacific coast has no roads that are sufficient. It was asserted. The heaviest pieces of the coast defense ordnance weigh 54 tons. To get a road that would stand up under this traffic, a roadbed of nearly 10 inches is necessary.

In view of this necessity, congress recently adopted a resolution to investigate the need of such a military road, and to make such surveys as might be necessary to locate it. The measure has the unanimous support of the congressmen from the Pacific coast. Practically every business house and every chamber of commerce has signified its cooperation.

AMBULANCE CORPS IS TO ACCEPT NO MORE MOTORS FOR SERVICE

Inability to Get Bodies Built in France and More Pressing Needs Given as Reason

In the name of mercy, Portland people recently contributed over $25,000 to the American field service for ambulances to be used at the war front. Young men were asked to enlist as drivers of the ambulances. The movement has been handicapped due to difficulty in getting cargo room for motors, and the plans necessarily have been altered. Accordingly, J. F. Ewing, who represents one phase of the movement in Portland, announced this morning that those unwilling to have their money spent for other war purposes can, on demand, get it back. Other needs, he added, are pressing.

Conditions at the front, inability to get the bodies of the ambulances built in France because of labor troubles and needs that take precedence over ambulance service, are assigned as the chief causes. The American ambulance corps has even changed its name to the American field service; its operations may have to do principally with supply trucks rather than ambulances, and young men who enlisted to drive ambulances may be found driving trucks. France has called for 3000 volunteer truck drivers to take the place of men whom it is desired to return to the trenches and the farms. The American ambulance corps, or rather the American field service, has stopped accepting cars.

The father's hand is needed in raising the boy. He should be the playmate and confidante of his sons. It is a man's job to raise a boy. And to accomplish this, religion is vital. Parents must not expect their children merely to obey them, but God. Some time religious training will be brought back into the public schools. But at present the prospect is hopeless. Christian people are discriminated against in the public schools in favor of agnosticism. Pages of pagan mythology may be read, but to read a page of the gospel would be an offense against the law.

ANNUAL SESSION OF SUMMER SCHOOL FOR CLERGY COMES TO END

Two Lectures by Dr. Gowen of Seattle and One by Bishop Webb of Milwaukee

The second annual session of the Oregon summer school for Episcopal clergy at St. Helen's Hall closed today with a lecture by Dr. H. H. Gowen at 2 p. m. on "The Second Coming."

The annual business session was held Thursday evening. Rev. Thomas Jenkins, rector of St. David's Portland, and Rev. Thomas Allenson of Chesham, Wash., were elected as the committee for next year's session. Great gratification was expressed over the presence of churchmen of such prominence and ability as Bishop Webb, Bishop Moreland and Dr. Gowen as the faculty of the school. Clergy from six dioceses were present during the session.

Bishop Moreland addressed an open meeting Thursday evening on "The Last Paradise of Parental Control." "Home may be a paradise," he said, "if there are children in it. Most destructive and terrible, then, is the murder of unborn children, and God certainly does not countenance the one-sided distinctions of human manufacture. Also there is no excuse for willful, unmanageable children, and the undisciplined child means undisciplined parents. Many mothers show their first anxiety for the moral welfare of their children in the juvenile court, interceding with tears that penalties may be evaded. As a matter of fact, comparatively few parents take the pains to become intimately acquainted with their children and to train them properly. The most important influence is the mother. In the first seven years of the child's life she can form its ideals for all the years to come. She needs the highest spiritual character to fit her for such a sphere."

Parents must not expect their children merely to obey them, but God. Some time religious training will be brought back into the public schools. But at present the prospect is hopeless. APPEARING AT THE BAKER THEATRE
JULY 1ST, 2D, 3D AND 4TH

America's greatest blackface comedian will entertain you with his inimitable humor if you have his exclusive Columbia Records.

Al Jolson's latest and biggest hit, sung by Al Jolson himself, is always out on Columbia Records while it is a hit—while everyone is playing, singing or whistling it. Listen to his ludicrous renditions of "Where Did Robinson Crusoe Go With Friday on Saturday Night?", "Now He's Got a Beautiful Girl," "Yaaka Hula, Hickey Dula" and other comic hits from his long repertoire, and you will think you are hearing Al Jolson himself!

The Columbia process of recording reproduces the drollery of such voices as Al Jolson's with the same mirror-like, brilliant fidelity which marks Columbia reproductions of operatic, orchestral and instrumental gems.

That is the one great reason why Al Jolson, Bert Williams, Weber and Fields, Frank Tinney and a score of other top-notch vaudeville and comedy stars make records only for the Columbia Company.

To hear their records is to appreciate it—and to have the time of your life, besides! Ask your dealer to play them today—"hearing is believing!"
