

Woman's War Work

THE Honor Guard camp at Columbia Beach is becoming very popular and the girls are not only having a happy vacation but they are hardening themselves for service should they be needed by taking long hikes, sleeping out doors, swimming, etc. Last Sunday they hiked to Seaside, took a dip in the surf and returned on foot. Miss Lucile Danforth, state leader for Oregon, left today to spend two weeks at the camp.

Collegiate Alumnae to Help.—The Association of Collegiate Alumnae has submitted a plan to the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense to enroll all girls between 16 and 21 for definite training. This training would include food conservation, the saving of clothing, and other economies, especially in the home; training in the use of telephone, typewriter, typewriting, clerical work, nursing and agricultural work.

Riverside Was Auxiliary.—At Riverside last Wednesday night, an enthusiastic crowd of Riverside women organized themselves into an auxiliary to the Red Cross chapter. There were 30 members signed for the Riverside organization. Mrs. R. E. Veant of Vale assisted in the organization. Following is the list of officers as elected: Chairman, Mrs. F. H. Van Wyngarten; vice chairman, Mrs. George Cox; secretary, Mrs. Clinton Woodward; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Fairman. The executive committee consists of Mrs. Ed Schutter, Mrs. Gene High and Mrs. Duncan McKee.

At Brogan Friday night, it was decided that the Jamieson members of the Willow River organization should withdraw in order to form a separate auxiliary of their own. When the Willow River auxiliary was first formed it was thought that the membership would justify only one auxiliary, but the increase in membership has been so rapid, and on account of a room at Jamieson, it is decided that the two organizations would be better fitted for the work than one.

Sutherland Organized Red Cross.—At a mass meeting Monday evening, a Red Cross auxiliary was organized in Sutherland. Several speakers addressed the meeting, Rev. A. A. Brittain making an especially earnest appeal for the great work.

Officers were elected as follows: H. H. Tisdale, president; Mrs. Mark N. Tisdale, vice president; Fred C. Helwig, secretary; Mark N. Tisdale, treasurer.

Another meeting will be held in the St. John theatre next Monday evening at 8 o'clock when Miss Agnes Pitchford of Roseburg will address the meeting, giving details pertaining to the work of the organization. The ladies of the Episcopal church have donated the use of the guild room for the organization during the war.

Rose City Park Auxiliary.—The Red Cross unit for the Rose City Park district meets in the Rose City Park Presbyterian church on Thursday afternoons at 2 o'clock. Every lady in Rose City Park district wishing to help in any way with the Red Cross work is invited.

Marshfield Honor Guard.—The dance given by the National Girls' Honor Guard, last Tuesday evening at Eagle's hall, Marshfield, proved a decided success. The ballroom was artistically decorated with flags and Red Cross posters, as it was a benefit for the Red Cross association. The programs were attractive, being a folder with a large Red Cross on the cover. After the tenth dance, 48 girls of the honor guard gave an exhibition drill while singing Jay Tower's two songs, "Stand Up and Fight for Uncle Sammy" and the Dear Old U. S. A. and "God Bless You and the Red, White and Blue."

86,081 Rookies Join Guard in Past Month

Washington, July 14.—(L. N. S.)—The war department today announced a gain of 86,081 recruits in the National Guard during the month of June. Of the enlistments, 65,353 were in regiments in states and 20,728 in regiments already called into the federal service.

By Vella Winner SUMMER WEDDING DECORATIONS One of the most attractive decorations for an early summer wedding is formed by the blossoms of the humble and utilitarian garden. In each vase a sprig of creamy, foamy appearance themselves gracefully for the purpose, either banded among foliage or in a central vase. Turn into a nipped wedding bell, try a nook formed by a lattice arrangement of foliage, especially that of laurel and rhododendron, used lightly, with sprays of flowers intermingled.

COFFEE TEA ROLLS One teaspoon sugar, one scant teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon salt, four t. spoons melted butter, one tablespoon molasses, and divide into rolls. Let these rise again until very light. Bake in a quick oven about 15 minutes.

VEGETABLES EN CASSE. ROLE Lina a mold with boiled rice. Fill the center with a vegetable mixture made by moistening 1/2 teacup of stuffed olives and 1/2 teacup each of cooked carrots, very small white onions and button mushrooms. Place over hot water until thoroughly heated. Turn out on a platter and cover with white sauce to which has been added some grated cheese and sprinkle over the top a little chopped parsley.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS After hanging a net curtain the edges of which are very much stretched, hang it on a rod in the window, take a net sponge and rub down the center, run a heavy brass rod through the lower hem. Let it stretch all night. When dry, it will hang perfectly even. To prevent matting from traveling cut each strip about six inches longer than necessary, then unravel each end for a couple of inches and tie the cords firmly together by little string. If this is done there will be no risk of the matting unraveling, as it usually does when taken up.

WAR ORDER PUTS END TO NIGHT FISHING IN THE LOWER COLUMBIA

Prohibition of Small Boat Movements Near Forts Is Felt Most by the Seiners.

Astoria, Or., July 14.—All night fishing in the lower harbor will be stopped by an order issued by the navy department at the request of the war department and made public here Friday by Captain Kuenzli. The order forbids any small boats, including fish boats, to be found west of a line connecting the Fort Stevens, Or., dock and the dock at Port Columbia, Wash., between sunset and sunrise. The regulation will become effective at sunset, July 16. The new rule will not apply to steamers entering or departing from the river and displaying proper lights, as the lookouts are able to distinguish what those vessels are.

Captain G. H. Dunbar Buried Astoria, Or., July 14.—Nine months after his death, Captain George H. Dunbar was buried here. He was master of the government survey steamer Arago when he turned his wheel over to the mate as the steamer was nearing her dock here. Going below, he turned a shotgun on himself and fired a bullet through his head. The body was held for orders from relatives in Maine.

Mill Fire Damage $8000 Astoria, Or., July 14.—Fire at the MacGregor mill Friday afternoon did $8,000 damage. The fire broke out in three dry kilns from overhead, the contents of two kilns were totally destroyed, the other partly.

Liberty Stage Wonderful THE stage of the Liberty theatre (formerly the Broadway) will possess a feature that has never been produced before on any stage. This will be two exact reproductions of two of Oregon's most noted waterfalls, Multnomah and Bridal Veil, even the walks and drive ways being correctly shown. The falls will be of running water and the illumination will depict the rising sun on the one side and the setting sun on the other. This lighting effect is marvellously beautiful. Behind the front waterfalls are two fountains of Venus, and surrounding these will be beautiful ferns and flowers, while framing the waterfalls will be two arches of trellis work. There are three curtains of heavy velvet, burnt orange in color, which work automatically under one control, two of the curtains falling as the third rises. The two are at the sides and the third covers the screen. As this one falls, the two side curtains are lifted, revealing the scenic falls and the fountains.

Bed Time Tales

A Plant Prisoner BRIGHT little plant once grew in the rich black soil of a truck garden away on the outskirts of a great big city. This plant had creamy colored straight stalks and gay green tops and no blooms at all, at least none that anybody cared about, for blooms were not what it was made for, you see. But he enjoyed growing and spent more of his spare moments trying to get taller than any other plant in the garden—which was ambitious to say the least.

Then one day the gardener came and cut some of the stalks and took them to market. "This is fine eating," he said in his most persuasive fashion, "buy of me—you will like this." But though many housewives looked and listened nobody bought his produce. "It's too green," they said, "we want white, tender celery when we buy. Yours is both it tough!" So the gardener went home and viewed his garden with a discouraged eye.

"You have too much sunshine," he said to the rows of celery. "You are too vain and you grow too much. I'll have to take you in hand and change your habits—you mustn't grow so strong." "How can I help that?" the celery seemed to answer him. "The sunshine is warm and lovely and I am made for growing." "That's exactly where you are wrong," declared the gardener. "You are made for selling, and if sunshine makes you grow but not sell—no more sunshine shall you have." And though the celery protested bitterly, the gardener got his spade and hoe and threw up the rich black dirt on both sides of the celery row—then he threw it up till it touched the green leaves and hid all the sturdy, strong green stems from view. Then he tramped it down with heel and spade till not a bit of sunshine could reach the celery stalks! They were shut up tight in a dark earth prison!

"Oh dear!" groaned the celery breathlessly. "I'm squeezed so tightly between these piles of damp black earth that I can't even breathe—please! oh please, let me out!" But the gardener made no answer. Prisoned there so tight and dark, the cheerful green celery grew pale and white. The strong green stems became slim and brittle, very different from their former sturdiness. Then one day the gardener dug away some of the black dirt, cut a few of the white stalks and went again to market.

This time every one was anxious to buy—he could have sold even more than he had. And ever since then gardeners everywhere bury their celery under rich black earth. People like the tender white stalks, but the celery—don't you wonder if it doesn't miss the sunshine? Monday—Three Fairy Wishes.

coming to the younger set. The Russian peasant blouse, which slips over the head, is the best for grown women. That is why all artists loved to accentuate by bands and the wide belt may be worn as low down as one cares to place it. It takes the place of bloomers when the skirt is fastened together at the lower edges between the ankles. Why should women who work put on the oldest and ugliest clothes they can find? If they would select blue for their color and have their working clothes made as well as possible with honest material and good lines they would look just as well in them as in their dress-up frocks—and in the majority of cases far better. The working color for clothes should be blue, as it is refreshing to the eyes. There is very little blue in nature, if we except the sky. There are few blue flowers—not many blue birds, nor fishes, nor insects nor minerals. In animals and in the human race it may be said there is no blue at all. That is why all artists loved to paint it wherever and whenever they could, as a contrast to nature. I would say to all women, work and work hard, be fearless of losing your charms, and with the confidence that you will acquire more beauty, health and grace by doing your work honestly. Have a glad heart, knowing that you are working for all—not for just one being. Who knows what life you may save "over there" by some honest labor, earnestly done over here? You have nothing to lose and everything to gain by doing your duty.

There is some sort of a woman's uniform made of khaki—nothing could be more unbecoming and inappropriate for women. That color was developed for the soldier in order that he might be lost in his surroundings to the enemy eye. As his surroundings are clay and dust, khaki is the only suitable coloring for him. But how unsuitable for us to wear such a color. We could not hide ourselves in the city streets dressed in a mud colored uniform. Why not go to the extreme? From the earth to the heavens and select blue for our uniform color? When we consider the many shades of blue from the sky shades to the deep sea shades we can take our choice and fit ourselves becomingly. There is no material that cannot be dyed one of the many shades of blue—therefore each may select the shade that suits her complexion in gingham, linen, cotton or wool—and so far as color is concerned, every one may look well.

By some chance or fate it has been decreed that one piece garment may be worn by all ages of women. We should accept this liberty and keep it. The one piece garment allows grace without eccentricity. It does not squeeze you in the waist, nor need it bind you in any part of your body. Sleeves were never so sensible as now, and any kind of work may be done without separating the bodies from the skirt. It seems that all the apparently capricious and good points of fashion have really happened because the designers took to copying some of the peasant garments that have been evolved through the centuries and so have copied many of the practical and good points. The old English smock, which slips over the head and covers the body to the knees, is practical and not unbecoming to the younger set. The Russian peasant blouse, which slips over the head, is the best for grown women. That is why all artists loved to accentuate by bands and the wide belt may be worn as low down as one cares to place it. It takes the place of bloomers when the skirt is fastened together at the lower edges between the ankles. Why should women who work put on the oldest and ugliest clothes they can find? Keeping Political "Pull" Out of Draft Exemptions

Political influences in the working of the draft exemption boards is a peril various journals foresee with alarm, and in their support they have no less an authority than the President himself, who sounded a note of caution on this point in his proclamation announcing the rules and regulations governing the selection of men for service in the national war-army.

In a Washington dispatch to the Socialist New York Call, the charge is made that both Republicans and Democrats were wrangling for places on the exemption boards "in order that one party or the other may have an opportunity to punish their political foes by sending the sons to the trenches."

In THE LITERARY DIGEST for this week, July 14th number, the general rules governing the selection of men for the national war-army are given, and the note of warning that boards shall not be derelict in their duty, is heard from various sources.
