 Oregon and Washington: tonight and Saturday fair, moderate northerly winds.

Weather Conditions

A low pressure system occupies the Rocky Mountain region extending from Saskatchewan, Canada, in a southerly direction to Arizona, with centers of depression over Montana, Utah and southern Arizona. This low pressure condition is attended by some cloudiness but only light showers at a few places. The pressure has been increasing over the Northwest, attended by generally fair weather. The high pressure area over the Northwest is a chain of centers over North Dakota, now covers the central portion of the country and was attended by generally fair weather. In the central valleys, a storm area lies over the extreme Northwest, attended by heavy rain, which was very heavy at the following places: Kootenai, Idaho, and Butte, Montana. The temperature changes during the last 24 hours were small except in Montana where they rose as much as 20 degrees. The morning temperatures are below normal everywhere except the northern Rocky Mountain region, the Great Basin and southern California.
