Bed Time Tales BY CLARA INGRAM JUDSON

Mr. Rooster Knows a Great Deal

"O, H, DEAR, but this is a stupid old hen, I think, one spring morning. Here I am—a fine, beautiful, big rooster—and I have to live in a common old chicken yard all the time! Who just can't get it somehow. Now of course he didn't know that everybody, no matter where they are or what they are, get tired and disgusted sometimes—no, he thought he was the only person so afflicted!"

Who ever saw eggs in such colors? But just the same, he was very curious. He walked closer and closer, and each time he went by the group of eager chickens he creened his neck to see what the chattering was about. Who wouldn't want to feed a nice handsome rooster like me? And just to show how very handsome he was, he walked up and down in front of the other girls.

Usually they were much impressed by him, for say what the others would, that grumpy old rooster had a wonderful way of looking at things. And other, today, nobody seemed to notice him. Nobody even looked at him. And how in the world can you impress people who don't look at you? It can't be done!

Even vain Mr. Rooster saw that no one was looking and wondered at it. "What can the matter be? It is so interesting to me!" he asked himself. "I think I'll watch and see what they are looking at."

So he strolled, quite casually of course, by the group of chickens and tried to see what they were so excited about. But though he could see that every chicken in the yard was looking at him, and though he could see that they were surprised and excited over something, he couldn't for the life of him, make out what it all was about.

"Stilly old things," he crowed, "they do get excited easily!"

ARE YOU GLAD OR SAD?

If you are a mother with a son or several sons of fighting age, are you proud of the fact, even though you may fear for their safety—or do you resent other women's suggestions that your sons go to the front? It is queer the different views held by mothers about their sons. A woman who has a son in the reserve corps was telling another of the possible call he would receive and bewailing the fact that he was so tied down that he would not be obliged to fight.

The second woman stared at her uncomprehendingly for a moment, then said: "You know I spend my days envying you who have husbands or sons who can go to their own country and wishing I were represented in some way. But I have no male relatives." And she was thoroughly sincere in this. In her own going in the way of a woman when war comes, she was giving all her time to working for her country, but still, she felt that anything she, a mere woman, could do to express her patriotism was so inadequate when compared to a man's God-given means of expression.

But other women, those with husbands, brothers and sons going in training, only wash their heads, declaring it is all very well for her to talk, but if she had a son—I wonder! Would it change her attitude? It is natural for a woman to have many heart-breaking moments, but the really loyal woman should be so thankful for her male kin that she would not let her male kin be not a craven coward, but a man who would not let his detachment of men go off to the training camp, the station platforms, of course, were crowded with women and girls, and it was interesting to watch the different leave-taking.

One woman, when her son stooped to kiss her, broke down and sobbed wildly on his shoulder. He looked up over her head and forced a smile at the boys, but one could see he was feebly upset. Another little woman was cheerful during the time that the train stood in the shed, but after it had gone she broke down, gave a few little sobs, then braced up and left the station smiling. One couldn't help contrasting these two mothers, the second so bravely overcoming her emotions.

Professor of Internal Medicine in Shantung University to Fill Forbes Pulpit.

Dr. Charles F. Johnson, of Tsinan, Shantung, China, will deliver an address next Sunday evening, at Forbes Presbyterian church, corner of Graham and Gantenbein avenues, on "The Gospel of Healing" or the practical side of Christianity as shown in the work of medical missions. Dr. Johnson is professor of internal medicine in the medical department of Shantung Christian university. The university is a union institution. The union consists of the American Presbyterian, the English Baptist, the Church of England, the Canadian Presbyterian, the American board and the Southern Presbyterian missions.

There are about 400 students in all departments, of which number 120 are in the school of medicine. Dr. Johnson has been 28 years in China, and for the past six years has been connected with the work of the medical school, giving one half of his time to the medical course and the other half to the general work of the station. In connection with the university is the union hospital, which has 128 beds, where 1000 inpatients were cared for last year. Last year in the outpatient department of this hospital, 35,000 patients received treatment.

Associated with Dr. Johnson through all these strenuous years is his wife, taking her place at her husband's side, having the dangers and discouragements of early missionary effort, shrinking from no duty and neglecting no service for the enlightenment and uplift of China. Dr. and Mrs. Johnson are on the eve of their return to China, after a year of rest in this country. Their son, Hosmer Johnson, will remain in the United States to complete his course of study at Lafayette college, Easton, at which institution Mr. Johnson is a sophomore. Round-Up Ticket Sale Opens Sept. 1

Pendleton, Or., Aug. 27.—The seat sale for the eighth annual Pendleton Round-Up, which is to be held on September 20, 21 and 22, will open on September 1. Vice President Ritter announced yesterday. The sale will be conducted in the portable office which will be stationed on a down town street. In order, however, that out of town people will not be discriminated against, the management is reserving six entire sections from which to fill individual orders, take care of the press representatives and special excursion parties. Also, in order to head off the scalper, no one person will be permitted to purchase more than $36 worth of tickets, which means one box for the three days, or 12 grandstand tickets. Mail orders are already being filled and, if the orders now being received have any indication, the audience at the 1917 show will be as large as any Round-Up crowd.

Drastic Ruling Made By Attorney General

Salem, Or., Aug. 27.—Strife exists between fishermen at the mouth of the Columbia river, and State Game Warden Shoemaker has asked the attorney general for an opinion defining fishing under the terms of chapter 207, laws of 1917. The attorney general's interpretation of the law will hit those who have been using purse seines there. Chapter 207 prohibits the use of purse seines in Oregon streams and fixes a deadline at the mouth of the Columbia. It appears certain fishermen have been going outside the deadline with their purse seines and would fish back to the deadline, at which point they would close their seines and drag them into shore to empty. The attorney general holds that is a violation of the law. He holds emptying the seine is a part of the act of fishing and cannot be lawfully done within the prohibited area.
