GOVERNOR PUTS END TO HUNTING SEASON IN WILDS OF OREGON

Forest Fires and Danger of Nimrods Shooting Soldiers Prompt Executive's Action

ENTIRE STATE AFFECTED

Will Be No More Legal Hunting Until Further Proclamation From the State House.

Salem, Or., Aug. 29. — The hunting season will not open on September 1. Governor Withycombe Tuesday afternoon issued a proclamation closing the season indefinitely, or until the forest fire period has passed. His proclamation states that the season will remain closed over the entire state until ordered opened by proclamation from his office. It includes all kinds of game.

In addition to the danger of more forest fires, it was announced at the governor's office that the chief executive took cognizance of the danger in which soldiers in drab uniforms would be in the woods if hunting was going on. There would be danger of soldiers being mistaken for deer. Soldiers are in the woods on patrol duty to check the work of firebugs.

Hunters have been allowed one week of sport, as the governor, over the protest of State Forester Elliott, allowed the hunting season to open on August 15 and remain open until August 21, and many hunters went into the woods. Many new forest fires developed during that and the following week, some being classed as hunters' fires and others attributed to incendiarism. The opinion has been expressed that firebugs took advantage of the open season to go into the woods without arousing suspicion. If the governor had not issued his second proclamation the season would have reopened September 1.

Water Bonds Boom Irrigation

Salem, Or., Aug. 29.—If Oregon has the same experience as California is having with its state securities commission, it will never regret that the 1917 legislature passed a law which provides for the certification of irrigation district bonds, according to Raymond Benjamin, chief deputy attorney general of California, who was here Tuesday visiting Attorney General Brown and looking into the operation of some of this state's recently enacted highway laws.

The Oregon law, relating to the certification of irrigation district bonds, was copied from the California law, which has been in effect four years. Mr. Benjamin said that before California passed the law only one irrigation district in that state ever succeeded in weathering financial storms and paying off the bonds it had floated.

Since the law went into effect, and the state commission has investigated and certified to the soundness of irrigation district bonds, such bonds have been selling at par and the irrigation districts are flourishing, said Mr. Benjamin.

The Oregon securities commission consists of the attorney general, state engineer and state superintendent of banks. It has certified to the bonds for two irrigation districts.

Salem, Or., Aug. 29.—W. B. Ayer, federal food director for Oregon, has announced the names of five persons who will deliver addresses at the state fair, which will be held the last week in September, on food conservation and other questions relating to the war and food. The speakers are Stephen A. Lowell of Pendleton, Wallace McCamant, justice of the supreme court; Dan J. Malarkey, Mrs. George McMath and Mrs. Millie R. Trumbull of Portland.

The state fair board will select the sixth speaker, so an address will be given each day of fair week.

In addition to this feature, the Oregon agricultural college, at the request of the food administration, will supply lecturers and demonstrators on food preparedness who will give lectures each day of the fair on how to eliminate waste in connection with food.

New Bottle Tariff Is Error

Salem, Or., Aug. 29. — The Great Northern Railway company has informed the public service commission that the rate of 75 cents the 100 pounds on bottles shipped from eastern points to Puyallup and Sumner, Wash., as given in a new tariff being filed, is a typographical error and application has been made to the interstate commerce commission to make a correction. The rate to Portland was 75 cents and is being increased to 90 cents. Large users of bottles, such as fruit juice manufacturers, are making a protest against the increase.

Experienced Labor Is Problem

Salem, Or., Aug. 29.—Lack of experienced men and efficiency rather than the actual shortage of men is bothering logging companies and sawmill operators, according to Labor Commissioner O. P. Hoff, who is now in Southern Oregon on the first lap of his annual tour of general inspection throughout the state. Commissioner Hoff, in daily reports sent in to his office, finds that labor shortage conditions vary in the logging and lumbering industries from but one per cent in some instances, to as high as 35 per cent in others, and wages have increased about 50 per cent. The greatest increase has been in the case of unskilled workers.

Car Shortage Makes Trouble

Salem, Or., Aug. 29.—The car shortage on the Southern Pacific is entailing hardships on various shippers, many of whom are filing complaints with the public service commission. The following telegram was received by the commission Tuesday from the Summit Lumber company at Summit:

"Unless we receive cars tomorrow will have to close. Will take three large cars to give us any relief. We have burned up 250 cords of wood this summer and are still burning on account of no cars. Newell's promises amount to nothing."

Car reports Tuesday placed the shortage at 1012 cars.

They Appear at Night in Hills Along Columbia River and Source Cannot Be Located

The Dalles, Or., Aug. 29.—Every effort is being made to locate mysterious signals on the Washington side of the Columbia river, which have been going on for more than a month. The signals come at different periods of the night, or in early morning hours, in the form of light flashes.

For a time it was believed they were automobile lights, but this proved untrue when the same thing continued night after night in about the same location. The night signals, if they are such, are plainly seen from The Dalles.
