

EDGAR E. COURSEN TO GIVE ORGAN RECITAL IN AUDITORIUM SUNDAY

Splendid Collection of Quaint and Dainty Numbers Is Promised the Public.

RECITAL WILL END AT 4

"Second Andantino in D Flat" by Lemare Will Be Popular Feature of Program on Sunday.

The program of Edgar E. Coursen's organ recital at the Auditorium Sunday will contain a splendid collection of quaint and dainty numbers besides the two or three big selections. Mr. Coursen does not believe in playing over the heads of a lay audience with a severely classical program, nor in tiring them with a too lengthy one. The recital will be over at 4 o'clock. Musicians claim that the "Second Andantino in D Flat," by Lemare, which Mr. Coursen will play Sunday at his recital on the big Auditorium organ, is destined to become the most popular composition of that great Englishman. A stately minuet by Tournay will be another taking number, as it contains a middle movement with very effective registration.

The program is as follows:
 Cecerelle Gullmists
 Andantino in D flat Lemare
 Minuet Tournay
 Group of Minutones Tournay
 A-March Petrali
 Persian Pastoral Balfour
 Lullaby Sullivan
 Negro Love Song Coverly
 Concerto Allegro Williams
 "Hilgrims Song of Hope" Balfour
 "The Answer" Wolstonehouse

Beauty Chat By Lillian Russell

Good Manners Waning?
 IS THE spirit of discourtesy abroad in the land? Has the incentive to thrive by the misfortunes of other countries ceased? People to be rude and indifferent? It seems of recent date that we find ourselves patronized by our trades people rather than patronizing them.

In care at the shops and restaurants, there is an air of prosperity and success which carries with it indifference to patronage. In the department stores the request of women to carry home bundles without paying them the slightest discount for making themselves delivery agents. Whatever theory may be entertained as to the propriety of such a practice, the fact remains that most of the little courtesies of life which once made the dealings of human beings with one another easy and agreeable have mysteriously vanished and we find in their place a gruff, sullen and indifferent demeanor and "I am better than you are" attitude on the part of those whose duty it is to minister to the necessities of the community, which surprises and irritates some of us, amuses others and gives all cause for contemplation.

The old time civilities of Mr. Miss or Madam seem to have disappeared completely and an abrupt form of address, curt and mannerless, seems to have taken its place. The telephone lends itself largely to this particular form of rudeness, and orders to shopkeepers' assistants and the servants of one's friends have special facilities for indulgence in the new discourtesy. The telephone call that brings you from the top of the house to the lower hall and greets you with "What's your number?" and when you reply, answers, "Ring off," is as exasperating as when you carefully call a number and are given two or three wrong ones before you can make the operator give you the correct one.

I have waited patiently while some shopgirl's discarded some dance of the night before or how to make their new clothes, before they would wait on me. The fault may be in the employees or it may be the neglect of good business principles. It has occurred to me that those who permit themselves such lapses from good manners as I have referred to believe that by so doing they are in some way asserting their independence or anticipating patronage which they are unwilling to accept. If this is so the course they pursue is a mistaken one. The true dignity of labor instinctively proclaims its presence wherever it exists, and no man's efforts will only add to the respect which is its due.

A false familiarity such as we find in the middle western cities where most of the shop girls call "dearly" on the assumption of an equality that does not really exist is always absurd, even when it is not offensive. Politeness has this advantage—doubly welcome in these days—that it costs nothing.

There is a satisfaction in normal business of having at least tried to please those who money pay for their goods. Business must be abnormal these days, for there is an atmosphere of "take it or leave it" almost everywhere. The excuse that labor is scarce is a fallacy. There are thousands of men and women waiting and striving to obtain employment—and at reasonable terms. This is a country with a democratic government, but it is far more reconcilable with our principles to extend the courtesy of politeness to each other than to antagonize by rudeness and self-importance.

After all, the real people remain and the rude and vulgar must go back to first principles of ill breeding. There never was and never will be anything to be gained by a spirit of antagonism. It is give and take in this world, and as we give so we must take. Business men and women—please at least give politeness.

There will be plenty of butter for table use if the housewife only thinks right about her cooking

MAZOLA

ANIMAL fats—butter, lard and suet—have been used for years for deep frying, sautéing or shortening—because the housewife could find nothing better. Today she is asked to reduce the use of these products in her cooking so that the country's resources may be conserved against a time of need.

At the same time she has found something better—Mazola the pure oil from corn—the ideal medium for sautéing, deep frying, shortening and salad dressings both from the scientific standpoint and from the practical standpoint.

Mazola reaches high cooking heat long before it smokes—cooks food more quickly and at the same time more thoroughly. This does away with that sogginess and greasiness so prevalent with the old cooking mediums.

And Mazola can be used over and over again because it does not transmit taste or odor from one food to another!

That is what makes it so wonderfully economical.

Get a can of Mazola from your grocer today. Sold in pint, quart, half-gallon and gallon tins—the large sizes give greater economy. Also ask for the Mazola Book of Recipes or write us direct—free on request.
