MORGANA SCORES BIG SUCCESS IN VERDI'S OPERA "RIGOLETTO"

Young Singer Makes à Fine Impression on First Appearance in Portland.

Guerrieri's Direction Large Factor in Success of Production-"Mme. Butterfly" Given Tonight.

By J. L. W.

Nina Morgana, colorature soprano scored a big success Tuesday night when the La Scala Grand Opera com pany presented Verdi's "Rigoletto" at the Auditorium. This young singer was heard here for the first time, and impression on musical Portland was indeed favorable. For a petite woman, she possesses a surprisingly large voice; her singing of "Caro me" was a delightful surprise,

Roberto Viglieni, baritone, sang the title role, instead of Mario Valle, who was on the original program, but who sang Scarpia in "La Tosca" Monday night. The change in the east proved no disappointment, for while Valle was a splendid Scarpia, Vioglini did fully as well in the role of Rigoletto. He has a powerful voice of sonorous quality and understands how to use it. And, too, he is a very capable actor. Opera Well Staged

The opera was well staged and went with much pep, thanks to Musical Di rector Guerrierl's enthusiasm and perfect familiarity with the work. He knows the score from A to Z, without turning pages and therein is a great advantage. And he is as familiar with the other operas of the company's repertoire.
