

PORTLAND BOY IN TRENCHES FINDS 'COLD CHOW' GOOD

Bad Cold Nearly Costs American Patrol Serious Loss and Prevented Taking Germans When Lad Coughed.

Plans to Ambuscade Germans in No Man's Land Fail Because No Teutons Appear; Colors to Front.

By Newton C. Parke

With the American Army in France, Nov. 21.—(L. N. S.)—A bad cold nearly cost an American patrol serious losses in a recent expedition into No Man's Land and also prevented the possible capture of a number of Germans.

The patrol had set out during a black night and made its way undetected to a point near the enemy's barbed wire where the men took up their positions in shell holes with the object of ambuscading Germans.

Plans for the ambuscade were carefully made. Shortly after the arrival of the men, a German patrol emerged from the German trenches and crept stealthily forward, moving directly into the trap laid by the Americans.

But just at the moment when the Yankee soldiers thought they had the situation well in hand a youngster from Detroit, who had been suffering from a cold, was seized with a violent fit of coughing.

American Strategy Fails

The Germans took the alarm and fled back to their trenches. The German batteries then began sending up illuminating shells, while the German machine guns cut loose on the Americans who were now fleeing back to their own trenches.

The Detroit boy was struck in this hand by a bullet and was the only man wounded.

It was learned today that the Americans had made careful plans to trap a large body of Germans in "No Man's Land," hoping to avenge themselves for the raid in which the Germans captured some Americans.

American captain and lieutenant, approaching the trenches, had a narrow escape when a German shell landed exactly between them 15 feet from each.

Colors Now at Front

For the first time since the war began American regimental colors have been at the front. The colonel commanding a certain unit took the colors with him and obtained a statement from a French commander that these were the first regimental colors on the battlefield.

It was the same colonel whose quarters in a chateau, just behind the lines, was struck by a German shell late Monday.

War is not such a bad game, so far as we have seen," said the colonel of a group of American soldiers holding a first line trench on the American sector. But if they seemed to be kidding, their eyes were on the alert, their rifles were tightly gripped and every muscle was taut for instant action.

The statement was made to a group of American correspondents. The soldiers were loud in their praise of the food served them in the trenches. At the time they were being served with a lunch of hot coffee and sandwiches of white bread and salmon.

Oregon Boy Is On Line

"This is the first cold chow we have had since we got in," said a Portland, Or., boy, "but it tastes mighty good. The trouble is, we just had a good hot feed about four hours ago and are not very hungry."

The dugouts are warm and comfortable and the only trouble is the rats that infest the soldiers' quarters.

one dugout that accommodates 28 men there are about 18 rats, a Yankee infantryman said, and the nights are made merry by chases after the rodents.

An American sergeant, who found time hanging on his hands, went hunting and potted a mink with a pistol. He had the skin stretched on a board drying in front of his quarters and he said he was going to make a cap out of it to wear under his shrapnel helmet.

Some of the American soldiers and German soldiers, as well, have been using wild geese that infest a pond in "No Man's Land" as targets to improve their shooting eyes.

Boches' Washing Interrupted

As the correspondents started back along a communicating trench the German guns, that had been silent for a while, opened up with shrapnel, spraying the trenches 200 yards in front of the party. Soon this firing ceased, but a moment later, without any warning, two German batteries opened up on a point behind the lines and kept up a hot fire for several minutes.

At one point on the front visited, the German trenches were only 700 yards away and were quite visible as they wound up the hillside. An American battery chose the occasion of the correspondents' visit to send a few shrapnel shells towards the German trenches, the result of which could not be seen, but tainting the headquarters of the correspondents near the Boches. Nearby was a machine gun emplacement for indirect fire.

"We played rather a rough trick on the Boches yesterday," said an officer. "We saw a lot of them hanging clothes up to dry and turned a couple of machine guns on them. Maybe they didn't scatter."

Captain's Escape Narrow

The officer's remarks were interrupted by a noise from the direction of the barbed wire entanglements. In from "No Man's Land" and possibly from the German trenches, walked an ordinary yellow dog wearing its tail. It was plainly anxious to make friends and without more ado joined the newspaper men.

Details of the narrow escape of an American colonel from a German shell (related in a cablegram yesterday) was witnessed by the correspondents. They were just entering a small village containing the headquarters of a certain American regiment near the front when three shells whined overhead and burst with a crash just around the curve of the street.

The correspondents' automobile drew up in front of a chateau with an American captain standing in front of the gate.

"Been quiet here?" asked someone. "Quiet hell!" replied the officer. "One of those shells struck the chateau and the others dropped down in front of you. You don't call that quiet, do you?"

Women in Divorce Action Under Ban

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Army officers' wives who sue or are sued for divorce will not be permitted to live in quarters at the Presidio, hereafter, under orders just issued by Major General Arthur Murray, commanding the western department. Similar orders have been issued in most of the other departments in the United States.

There is a shortage of quarters at all of the military posts. This condition has been brought about by the induction of thousands of new officers into the service.

U. S. Medical Reserve Officer Loses Life

Washington, Nov. 21.—(L. N. S.)—One American medical reserve officer attached to the British forces was killed and one wounded in fighting on the Flanders front November 6, General Fersching reported to the war department this afternoon.

First Lieutenant Orlando Gochnaur was killed. His next of kin is Mrs. F. A. Gochnaur, Freeport, Ill. First Lieutenant Alexander J. Gillis was slightly wounded. His next of kin is Mrs. Anna A. Gillis, 15 Park Place, Carbondale, Pa.

Red Oak, Iowa, Nov. 21.—(L. N. S.)—Attorneys in the case of the Rev. Lyn G. J. Kelley, accused of the eight Villisca ax murders on June 9, 1912, today predict that the trial will end Friday. This is the second trial.

SUBMARINES FOILED; NATURE AND AMERICA JOIN AGAINST DIVER

Increased Patrols and Storm-swept Seas Sound Doom of U-Boats' Dark Campaign.

FIGURES ARE CHEERING

Losses Greatly Reduced and But One Large Vessel Destroyed During Week Just Over.

Washington, Nov. 21.—(L. N. S.)—As many German submarines have been destroyed within the last two months as in the 12 months previous.

The submarine has failed in so far as its main objective—the starvation of England—is concerned. It still presents a serious menace to shipping. But the "pests of the sea," as Lloyd George called them, are being dealt with more effectively every day that passes. The destruction of five on Saturday demonstrated this.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels Tuesday made an assertion concerning the great increase in the destruction of submarines. He refused to give figures. He would not confirm reports that American naval vessels had played a part in Saturday's harvest of submarines, declaring he had had no advice from Admiral Sims on the subject.

Former Menace Nullified

Mr. Daniels was most optimistic in his views concerning the submarine situation. He let it be known that he has no reason to change his views, expressed by inference last week, that the submarine, as a definite menace has ceased to exist.

Naval officers pointed to Lloyd George's statement and the report of last week showing that only one British ship of more than 1600 tons had been sunk in the seven day period as sufficient proof of the increasing ineffectiveness of the submarine.

They also called attention to the fact that this result had not been brought about by any sudden stroke of inventive genius, but by a steady increase in the number of destroyers in the submarine zones.

American Aid Important

America's entrance into the war, they said, was directly responsible for this preponderance which has sounded the doom of the U-boat as a winning weapon.

New and effective means of dealing with submarines are constantly being put into operation as a result of the councils in London of the naval genius of the American, British and French admiralties. A large part of the effectiveness lies in their secrecy.

At this season weather conditions are all on the side of the allies. Submarines are most effective in spring and summer—times of long days and calm seas. The storms of winter and the long black nights make even nature the enemy of the U-boats.

Stronger and more effective patrols and convoys are depended upon to get American troops overseas untouched. The navy expects that an occasional returning transport may be sunk, but every precaution is taken to guard troop ships en route to France.

Great Liner Sails With 1200 Aboard

New York, Nov. 21.—(U. P.)—Laden with 1200 passengers, including the Austrian diplomatic corps en route from China home, the huge Norwegian-American liner Bergensford sailed from here Tuesday. She carries 7000 tons of foodstuffs for Norway. Her passenger list is the largest to be taken out of an American port by a neutral ship since the outbreak of the war.

Only at Stateside was the liner on Germany. The Bergensford was thoroughly searched and will be required to stop at Halifax for another examination. The Helge Olav, a Scandinavian liner, also departed Tuesday bearing 650 passengers.

Slacker to Start Serving Sentence

Vane Valentine Dart Given 10 Years at Hard Labor, Taken to Alcatraz Disciplinary Barracks—Pleaded Guilty.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—(L. N. S.)—Vane Valentine Dart was taken from Fort Winfield Scott today to Alcatraz disciplinary barracks, where he is under sentence to serve ten years at hard labor as the first draft slacker to be convicted of desertion by an army court martial. Dart deserted at Santa Anna, September 20, failing to appear before the Orange county exemption board that had summoned him. He was captured a week later, and pleaded guilty to two charges—desertion and violation of the draft act.

Dart's sentence, approved by Colonel L. E. Goodier, judge advocate of the western department, dishonorably discharges him from the service and forfeits all pay and allowances due him under the army regulations.

Aviation Appeals To Young Men

The Dalles, Or., Nov. 20.—Robert McCormack, son of J. K. McCormack, a banker of Spokane and well known throughout the northwest, was last Wednesday admitted to the aviation corps after undergoing three operations before being accepted by the examining board. He will leave for Fort Sam Houston to begin his training.

Mr. McCormack is a graduate of the University of Oregon, and of Columbia university, New York. He is well known in The Dalles, often visiting at the home of his uncle, D. L. Cates, city recorder, and has been the guest of his grandmother, Mrs. P. W. DeHuff. Homer Watson and Howley of this city have enlisted in the aviation corps and will go to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, to begin their training. Both attended The Dalles high school.

PRUSSIANS ARE TAKEN ASLEEP IN TRENCHES

have enough guns to concentrate, so why worry? That must have been the German psychology.

Germans Surrender Quickly

No more utterly demoralized human beings in the world were seen than these same sleekly confident Boches as they crawled from their dugouts, sleep barely out of their eyes, at the sound of a crash and burst of machine-guns above them—to find British soldiers swarming everywhere. They raised their arms with shrilling cries of "kamerad! kamerad!" and fled hither and thither, dazed and terror-stricken. Guns that never fired a shot in this battle were seized by the Tommies or else crushed into the yielding earth by the steady weight of the tanks.

Cement emplacements, steel bound roofs of dugouts crunched in, burying Germans like ants in hills trodden underfoot.

Britain's victory came after a preliminary advance Tuesday morning. It was then, under black skies, that the tanks lumbered forward as the new tanks for the infantry.

Stereotyped Methods Abandoned

All of the stereotyped rules of preparation for war and of the actual battle strategy itself were thrown aside in the British coup.

Some time Monday night a large number of British tanks took their berth behind the lines. The Germans didn't hear them; it was too dark for them to be seen.

In the early morning Tuesday these monsters crawled forth in the heavy light between darkness and daylight. A smoke barrage concealed their camouflaged sides. The Germans didn't know they were in action until they rumbled and wheezed over their heads.

Surprise Was Absolute

The Hindenburg line—the impregnable, never-yielding, the last word in defenses—was taken, therefore, without a single preparatory gunshot. How complete was the surprise for the Germans was evidenced in the fact that at one point a German division was in process of relieving another at the very moment of the attack.

EIGHT MILES OF MEN MARCH IN REVIEW AT AMERICAN LAKE CAMP

Entire Army Division Sweeps Past Commander in Great Show of Battle Strength.

Camp Lewis, American Lake, Wash., Nov. 20.—(L. N. S.)—For the first time in the history of the Pacific coast an entire division of troops under the new organization was reviewed Tuesday afternoon by Major General Greene, commanding the Ninety-first division and the 168th depot brigade here.

As the thousands of men passed the reviewing party, the civilians who thronged the grounds to the rear received a never-to-be-forgotten impression of the immensity of the camp to which men from eight states have been summoned to do their country's bidding for the perpetuation of democracy.

It was the most impressive military spectacle witnessed here since the arrival of the men. As the 40,000 olive drab clad men, all but two regiments of whom two months ago were pursuing their peaceful occupations, marched past, General Greene, hardened veteran of three campaigns, was visibly moved.

The parade was nearly eight miles long and began shortly after 2 o'clock when it was nearly dark when the last company passed the reviewing party. Every regiment was preceded by its regimental band.

"How a Bank Serves Business"—Number Two

Trade Acceptances

BUSINESS is slow to appreciate the value of the Trade Acceptance. The Federal Reserve system urges this as a great step in strengthening credit and facilitating collections.

No one should hesitate to ask for or to give a Trade Acceptance. In mercantile transactions it takes the place of open accounts, and offers a much stronger basis for bank credit. When indorsed by a member bank, the Federal Reserve Bank considers the Trade Acceptance a desirable investment.

In this, our new Banking Act is pointing out to business a way better to utilize its credit.

Any of our officers will be glad to explain fully the many advantages of the Trade Acceptance.
