Tupper gave an intensely interesting account of the achievements of Pasteur, taken from Page's "Pasteur and After." Mrs. A. F. Walker read a helpful chapter from "Child Nature and Child Nurture," entitled "The Purpose and Place of a Child's Fears," which was followed by general discussion. An added feature the program, suggested by Mrs. Fielding, was an exchange department to which questions of any nature, either big or little, can be brought for solution The program closed with a tender little 'slumber song" sung by the hostess. Jimmy Coon and Peter Rabbit Get Angry WELL, it was comical to see Peter

Rabbit walking to the second hand clothing store with Jimmy Coon to buy that new pair of pants for Peter. Of course, Peter's mother had pinned her new gray shaw! around little Peter to make him look as nice as possible. But you know that Peter's hind legs are very long, and the wind was blowing hard, and the pins kept coming unfastened.

And Jimmy Coon was kindness itself as they stopped very often, so that Jimmy Coon could pin that gray shawl tight around Peter to take the place of his pants.

Jimmy Coon was almost convulsed with inward laughter, but he was too some candy imaginable. Already Santa much of a gentleman to laugh and hurt Claus has filled hundreds of boxes, both the feelings of his little chum, Peter large and small, with these goodles and Rabbit. So Jimmy Coon looked as they may be had at the Liberty Shop, solemn, as if he was going to a funeral.
