When Time, who steals our years away, Shall steal our pleasures, too, The memory of the past will stay And half our joys renew. - Moore.

New Offerings on the Screen and Stage

Cinderella Man Dainty Little Play

Performance at Baker One of Most Charming Things the Alcazar Players Have Done.

GEORGE PRIMROSE, the world's most famous minstrel, who heads his own company of seven, at Pantages this week.

George Primrose Wins Pantages Audience

EVERY seat was occupied for the opening performance of Pantages' new bill, and it is safe to say that none in the large audience went away dissatisfied, for not only is it a bill of unusual excellence, but the acts are of such variety as to suit all tastes.

"THE CINDERELLA MAN" is one of the most charming things the Alcazar players have done, and they act it with the cobwebby daintiness that is its inherent right. There is nothing in this play of Carpenter's to make one think very hard; no problem, either social or otherwise, to be solved—just a beautiful modern fairy tale, where a poor little rich girl meets and loves a rich-in-genius-but-poor-in-pocket poet, and how she allows him to deceive himself as to her identity, so that he, not knowing her wealth, shall not put her out of his life.

Play Resulted In Actors Enlisting

Patriotism of Film Which The Journal Will Give Tickets To Has Wonderful Effect.

THE only trouble with a film like "The Man Without a Country," according to Director Ernest C. Wade, who produced the thrilling photoplay, is that its rapid fire patriotism inspiring action worked just as completely on the actors in the drama as it does on the audience, and the story, which has changed innumerable possible slacker into patriots of the highest type, quickened the desire of many of the film actors taking part in the production to present work for example, they take an immediate active part in the war as George Marlo, who in the photoplay enacts a patriotic young American.

Beauty Chat BY LILLIAN RUSSELL

Will Women Be Trousered After the War? MANY of my male friends are debating the question as to whether women will don the masculine mode of dress after the war, or whether the influence necessitated by working clothes will predominate over the more feminine and less useful garments.

MIRIAM COOPER, the Fox screen star, who plays flirting Spanish senoritas, with grace and charm.

I dreaamy that some women, a small percentage, will delight to display a puttee ankle with knickerbockers on many a motorcycle. And so-called "national dress" will be worn for climbing and long-distance walking. Nothing should be said against that. But I don't think that even women who boasted that they would never return to wearing the skirt will appear at the opera or the theatre wearing extraordinary impositions upon male attire done in silks and chiffons. I should like to see the face of one of our dress designers when asked to fashion evening dress for women upon the model worn by men. Is there anyone in the world bold enough to say that the dress history of thousands of years can be completely altered in the course of a few years? That women will turn their backs upon dresses which add to their charms—the notion is absurd. I think we should have the other half of the world, men, in revolt at the idea. And we women certainly like appreciation of our taste as shown in our toilettes.

Shakespearean Treat Promised

Much interest is being manifested in the forthcoming Shakespearean season at the Heilig on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, with a popular matinee on Saturday. Advance reports are to the effect that Mr. Keller and his company are giving truly artistic and splendid interpretations of the words of the greatest of all playwrights, and the opening of the short season is looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure.
