

WAR ZONE LETTERS FROM OREGON BOYS IN NEXT SUNDAY'S JOURNAL

New Offerings on Screen and Stage

Harry Lauder Is Making War His Forte

Capacity Audiences at Heilig Swayed by His Stories of Front.

By S. R. Jr. HARRY LAUDER is no longer only the most famous Scotch comedian of our time. He is a tragedian as well. His mission is no longer merely to amuse and entertain and to furnish relief for gold's sake. His life-work now is to war against the Hun, ravisher of his motherland and murderer of his only son, Jock.

Not to say that the vast audience that greeted Lauder yesterday and last night at the Heilig were not entertained and amused as in other days. The Lauder personality, mellowed perhaps by the sorrows of death, is not the less gripping. It sparkles from the Scotchman's eyes; ripples sweetly over the slurred burr of his voice; radiates from the aura of his bare knees; from the hang of his sporrans; from the tilt of his tam, and flows down over the footlights to grip at the very heartstrings, and make you love the man, or at least the little country and the homefolks and the ideals he represents.

Lauder was given an ovation when he stepped into the spotlight. Each one of his songs and stories was well received; each succeeding one the more vociferously it seemed, but still, the real, big, spontaneous, sympathetic outburst came when he started to talk about the war; of what it means to him; to the boys overseas; to those who are going over, and to us, who must remain on this side to keep the home fires burning against the time when the soldier-heroes—no, not all of them—come back.

Lauder told of his visit to the trenches, of the desolation in the wake of the Hun in France, of the life of the soldiers in camp and in the trenches, and of the heroism and sacrifices of the allied armies, and particularly of the Scottish regiments. He flashed from the eyes of the lovable comedian as he told of the inspiration instilled by a visit to the west front, his stocky shoulders straightened, and his chest swelled as he related vividly the sacrificial bravery of the boys and men who pile up out of the trenches and over the parapets to battle the merciless German hordes to the death; his voice quivered but an instant as he recalled again how he found the memories of the old folks at home surging in the hearts of the men in service, and though he made no mention of the loss of his own son and heir, his thoughts were of him and his audience knew it, and sympathized silently.

The war has "got" Harry Lauder. With his long training and wonderful personality he is bringing the meaning of the conflict home to us in America. In this he is doing great work. He is happy as of old in song and story. But one feels that he is anxious to get down to the real serious business in hand—the war—and the need of our bending every effort to help win it. He makes personal appeal for his own relief fund, the care of maimed Scottish sailors and soldiers, and appeal for war activities in general.

Notwithstanding his much advertised "farewell tour" Lauder announced that, barring the possibility of his becoming a U-boat victim, he probably will be back. He is billed for Australia next and may cross the United States again on his way over.

Lauder is carrying with him this time a troupe of clever Japanese workers, Adelaide Bell and Arnold Grazer, out-of-the-ordinary dancers; Francis Renault, a la Julian Eltinge, the Arnaut Brothers, musical eccentric clowns, Cleo Gascolone, petite prima donna, and the Scottish Highlanders band.

The Heilig probably never held a larger audience, certainly never a larger one for a vaudeville attraction, than it did last night.

FRANCIS BUSHMAN and Beverly Bayne in "Fighting Blood," the romantic and thrilling feature which opened at the Liberty today. It is a play depicting the great vital problem of real men and women.

Bed Time Tales

BY DR. WARREN & PARTRIDGE
Another Night in the Sugar Lot
JIMMY COON and Teddy Possum kept their eyes peeled on Farmer Jones and Little William in the sugar lot. These two rascals watched every movement of the Farmer and his son. And they hid behind the big chestnut tree to find out everything they could about tapping maple trees.

And all day Farmer Jones and Little William boiled that maple sap. And then the rogues saw Farmer Jones and Little William go into the little cabin in the sugar lot and eat their lunch.

And all day Farmer Jones and Little William worked around that big boiling pot; and it smelled so sweet that Jimmy Coon and Teddy Possum almost went wild.

And Teddy whispered, "Jimmy, I cannot wait another minute. I feel as if I should die if I didn't eat some of that maple-sugar!"

Bushman, Bayne Are Featured At Liberty

"Fighting Blood" in Which Two Well Known Stars Appear Is Full of Thrilling Romance.

BEAUTIFUL settings, thrilling moments and youthful romance abound in "Fighting Blood," which opened today at the Liberty theatre with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the leading roles. "Fighting Blood" is a play of good American constructive-ness yet it does not mention a world war. It is the only conflict between old, outgrown ideas of aristocracy and the great, vital problems of real men and women. It is an object lesson in the right kind of helpfulness, the aid that is given with a smile and a hand-clasp rather than the smug help that is sent by a check to avoid contact with the "masses."

Grandmother Was the Druggist

In the early days of our country grandmothers were the druggists, and their concoctions consisted mostly of roots and herbs gathered from the fields and forests. There was peppermint for indigestion, mullein for coughs, skullcap for nervousness, thoroughwort for colds, wormwood for bruises, and sprains and so on. They were successful remedies, too. It was from a combination of such roots and herbs that Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., more than 40 years ago originated her now famous Vegetable Compound; and during all those long years no other remedy has ever been discovered to restore health to ailing women so successfully as this good-old-fashioned root and herb medicine.

How to Rid the Skin of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)
A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.—Adv.
