

JOHN REDMOND IS LOST TO LIBERTY

Great Irish Nationalist Dies in London Following Operation; Was Home Rule Leader.

London, March 6.—(U. P.)—John Redmond, famous Irish leader, died early today of heart disease, following an intestinal operation.

Redmond became critically ill several days ago. At that time it was announced that he was suffering from a malignant cancer.

He had been the Irish Nationalist leader in the house of commons since shortly after his election to parliament in the '80s. He was the prominent factor in the home rule movement.

Redmond was a powerful orator of the Rooseveltian type. It was his program to antagonize every British government, hoping to force Irish home rule through methods approximating "insurgency."

Loyal to the Empire
When the war government failed to pass the home rule bill Redmond was popularly believed to have suffered a broken heart. Yet he refused to join the Sinn Féin movement and was intensely patriotic, almost imperialistic, in his loyalty to the war government.

As a result, his popularity in Ireland waned and recently there had been a movement in his home district to succeed him in parliament.

Redmond did not want absolute independence for Ireland. He desired a government for that country similar to that of the Dominion of Canada.

Son Elected to Parliament

Redmond was born in 1851, the son of W. A. Redmond, member of parliament from Belfast. He was first elected to parliament from New Ross in 1881. In 1885 he was elected from New Westford and in 1891 from Waterford. He had visited America several times, generally for the purpose of raising funds to push the home rule movement. His son, William Archer Redmond, was elected to parliament from East Tyrone in 1911.

Redmond's brother, Major William K. Redmond, member of parliament from Clare, was killed in action on the west front recently.

Cruel Tolls Hastened End

New York, March 6.—(I. N. S.)—T. P. O'Connor, Irish parliamentary leader and a close friend of John Redmond, said today, when informed of the death of the Irish leader, that he believed death was hastened by cruel and unwarranted attacks that have been made upon him during the last two years.

"I have known Mr. Redmond as a friend for more than 40 years," said O'Connor, "and have found him always kind, true and loyal."

"Though his death may have been caused by heart failure," he hastened to say that in his belief it was hastened by cruel and unwarranted attacks that have been made on him for the last two years.

"As a friend and comrade his word was his bond. As a champion of Ireland's cause, he labored incessantly. My regret is inexpressible."

REDMOND STOOD FOR THE WORLD'S LIBERTY

J. Hennessy Murphy, president of the United Irish league in Portland, after expressing regret and sorrow at the death of John Redmond, paid tribute to the work of the Irish leader. He said:

"What I could say of John Redmond was said while he lived. Let those who vilified and betrayed him replace him if they can."

"At this time it would take a tremendous effort to turn the world from its distractions, but the death of Redmond is one of them."

"History will grant him a most conspicuous place in Ireland's long struggle for self government. He succeeded where other great leaders failed."

"But of all the great movements associated with his name, none will do more honor to his memory than when at the outbreak of the war, without a moment's hesitation, he subordinated the liberty of his native land to the home and liberty of the world."

"Now that he is dead his great character and achievements will be remembered and probably will hasten an agreement among his former associates in Irish constitutional convention."

Mr. Murphy declares his belief in that Joseph Devlin in all likelihood will succeed Redmond in leadership of the Irish parliament.

FISH CLOSED SEASON WILL BE ENFORCED, IS WORD OF SHOEMAKER

May as Well Advise Farmers to Eat Seed Wheat, Is Argument of Game Warden.

Will L. Finley, state biologist, and Carl D. Shoemaker, state fish and game warden, announced during addresses before the Rotary club at the Benson hotel Tuesday afternoon that it is the state's intention strictly to enforce the closed season on salmon and other food fish.

"The argument in favor of throwing off all restrictions on the catching of fish as a war measure during the present emergency is a good thing to slaughter young stock to provide the people with food that can be used to substitute for foods needed by our armies has force—if that were the only consideration," said Mr. Shoemaker.

"But no one has been heard urging the farmers to consume their seed wheat. No one has said that it would be a good thing to slaughter young stock because the country requires food. It would be just as sensible to consume seed and young stock as not to allow a part of the run of salmon to reach the spawning beds."

"We are striving to make every acre of water surface in Oregon produce as much in food value as possible, just as the land is made to produce," explained Mr. Finley, whose exhibition of motion pictures depicting the sport of angling, the run of salmon and studies in bird and animal life were of thrilling interest to the Rotarians.

Joseph Hahn, a Chicago Rotarian, won appreciative applause with his rendition of the "Rotary March," composed by himself.

YANKES HIT GERMANS FOR HEAVY LOSSES

The pounding American guns died down during a heavy snowfall. When this let up slightly the artillery started again and the bombardment continued through the day.

HUN SURPRISED AT KIND TREATMENT IN HOSPITAL

By Henry G. Wales

With the American Army in France, March 6.—(Delayed)—(I. N. S.)—For the first time in several days an enemy airplane attempted to fly over the American lines today at a low altitude. The Yankee gunners were not slow in manning their anti-aircraft guns and the Hun aircraft was driven off in a hurry.

The artillery fire has been light today. Hazy atmosphere has made observation hard. The normal amount of patrolling was carried out, however.

An observation balloon is being sent up almost daily now by the Americans. The hot air balloon is being sent up from General Pershing's command, all of the ground men being Americans as well as those going aloft.

No man's land is covered with snow now, but in the rear the snow has melted and the Americans are having muddy going.

One of the most bewildered men in this part of France today is a Prussian prisoner, who was taken by the Americans last Friday. His leg was shattered by an American bullet, and he is being taken care of by an American doctor. He showed the greatest and genuine surprise when the doctor used an anesthetic before operating on him. He told the physician, who speaks German, that he had not expected any kindness, and that he had feared the operation would be performed without any drug.

His bewilderment grew when he began to get American food. He couldn't understand where so much variety came from. He said the white bread did not seem very filling after the coarse, black composition that he had been eating for four years.

The prisoner declared that the German raiding party was a picked body of men and that it was made up of volunteers. He said no rum or other liquor was given to the men before they went over the top.

Gas Victims Recovering
A hundred odd Americans who were "gassed" in the recent German raids, are still in field hospitals, but are well on the road to recovery from the effects of the poisonous fumes. Most of them inhaled phosgene chlorine. Those who got a dose of the vicious "mustard gas" are suffering particularly intense pain, but all are recovering.

The drilling of our men in methods of defense against gas has been intensified since the large scale German raids in which the fumes were so profusely employed. The men are taught particularly to learn distinguishing gas projectiles from others and in donning their masks with lightning speed.

Special officials are assigned to test the atmosphere constantly. Phosgene gas has the odor of dead fish, while the "mustard" gas has a sickeningly sweet smell. It is estimated that five minutes of inhaling the chlorine results in severe death. Breathing in a few whiffs of it makes a man a case for the stretcher bearers, as walking after inhaling these fumes is virtually impossible, since they affect the heart and any physical exertion aggravates the victim's condition.

Phosgene, however, has a slow heart action, sometimes killing many hours after it is taken without any symptoms showing before the victim's case becomes critical. Phosgene chlorine is comparatively painless, but the "mustard" gas produces agony to the eyes. It makes the surface of the body wet and sweaty and results in considerable sweating.

The box respirator masks used by the British have been adopted by the Americans. They are particularly efficacious against the phosgene chlorine. They can be worn for five hours at a time.

Lack of rubber has forced the Germans to use leather masks. The gases used by the allies penetrate leather, rubber alone being impervious to the fumes. "Green" troops suffer most from the effects of gas because only those who have once gone through the effects are sure whether they are inhaling gas. Thus troops often do not know that they are "gassed" until they feel over.

British Capture Machine Guns

London, March 6.—(U. P.)—Fighting activities continued along the British front Tuesday night and early today, according to Field Marshal Haig's official report.

"East of Bullecourt, English troops conducted a successful raid this morning, taking a few prisoners and two machine guns," Haig stated. "Our casualties were slight."

"North of the Scarpe and in the neighborhood of Lens we made successful raids last night."

"Southeast of Gouzeaucourt the hostile raiders were repulsed, with conditions prisoners and captured machine guns resulted from these encounters."

Treasury Gets $441 In Small Change
Sheriff Hurlburt turned over $441 to County Treasurer Lewis today. This sum represents a clear and unexpected gain to the county. It is composed entirely of fractions of cents coming from 188,000 taxpayers who could not make the exact change, say of six-tenths of a cent.

"When the sum to be paid came to a certain sum and fraction of a cent, less than a half, the fraction went to the taxpayer. When the fraction exceeded a half the county was winner. The $441 was made up of 188,000 small amounts," explained Hurlburt.

EXPERTS IN EMPLOY OF CITY ARE GIVEN INCREASE IN WAGES

Action Is Taken to Prevent Loss of Men Held Valuable to Service.

Danger of losing men from the city employ who have been in city service for many years and who are said to be expert workmen was avoided this morning when the city council allowed increases in the wage scale of certain experts in the water bureau and in the bureau of fire.

The new scale in the water bureau is as follows: Foremen carpenters, $5 per day; assistant carpenters, $4.50; day laborers, $3.50; assistant foremen, $1.25 per month; assistant foremen and mechanics, $1.25.

John M. Mann, commissioner of public utilities, made no request for additional salaries for common laborers, but explained that the men for whom he sought increases could not be replaced at the salaries proposed in the ordinance. The increases, he said, spelled practical economy because many of the men threatened to leave the city employ if increases in salary were not granted.

The new scale of wages in the fire bureau applies to men employed on the fireboats and is as follows: Two masters, $135 a month; two pilots, $130; foremen and linemen, $128; three machinists, $125, and an increase of $5 per month for plumbers, blacksmiths and marine engineers employed on the fire boats.

"These men were not granted increases in pay at the time of the year," said Mr. Bigelow, "and all are expert workmen. Many were ready to quit and to replace them would mean even higher salaries than the new scale provides." A general request for increase of salaries in all departments of the city is expected, according to Dan Kellaher, commissioner of finance. The council will not act until all requests have been filed with the city auditor, except in emergency cases. Mr. Kellaher is preparing a comparative scale showing wages paid by the city and by the open market, which will be used when the general request for salary increases are considered.

PROPOSAL IS NO JOB BUREAU
Commissioners Favor Letting City Cooperate With Federal Bureau.

Elimination of all private employment bureaus and the centralization of all labor recruiting at the municipal employment bureau with the United States employment service cooperating, is favored by several city commissioners.

At a meeting of the city council this morning the council granted a license to Charles E. Carr to operate a bureau at 24 North Second street, over the protest of Commissioner Kellaher, who declared that Carr's record in operating an agency in Spokane was not good. C. A. Bigelow, commissioner of public affairs, supported Mr. Kellaher in the final vote.

Mayor Baker and Commissioners Barbur and Mann voted to grant the license. Mayor Baker declares that nothing had been shown that Carr was any worse than men already licensed to operate employment agencies.
