Merry Round of Good Things Staged

May Robson Clever as Ever and Leona La Mar Amazing.

By Betty Francis
WELL, dearie, what a week I've had. I just can't get over the way Leona LaMar answered my questions at that strictly confidential matinee at the Orpheum Wednesday afternoon, and if she just didn't read my very mind I don't know what you'd call it.

And Thursday night when the curtain went up at the Itellig and there wasn't any cue music, and no spot light, and no chorus girls in full undress, it hardly seemed that there was going to be any show. But there was, and May Robson was just as clever as she was, oh, ever so many years ago, when I first saw her.

Manager Billy Pangle is simply all fussed up about his new shows, too. Thursday night the Skinner will arrive with his "Mr. Antonio," and I just know Mr. Pangle would say it's going to be the very best thing of the season, were it not that Max Pigman is coming the following week in "Nothing But the Truth."

"So we'll just have to wait and judge for ourselves, I guess, and see which one makes us laugh the most. I'm sure the plays this season have been comedies? And don't you think that's all arranged on purpose, to take people's minds off the tragedy of the war?"

Let's hope, too, that next week will be nice and warm, because beginning to-morrow afternoon Manager McGuffey is going to have for his big type act "The Greater Morgan Dancers," and up in the art room yesterday I saw Jack Seed working on a picture of them, and saken alive, they scarcely had a thing on. Frank says they're great, and he's a good judge.

Milt Seaman of the Baker and the Lyric was in to see me this week, all smiles over the smashing success of the Alcazar Players this week in "Believe Me, Xantippe," and with an additional beam because tomorrow they're going to put on "Salomy Jane." You know "Salomy," don't you? Great stuff, and I'm sure the Alcazar people will do it justice.

Down at the Lyric (Miss) Billie Bingham has found a home with the patrons already, and will be seen again next week in "Claret de Luxe." Sounds good, doesn't it?

This seems to be a good place as any to remind you to buy Thrift Stamps today. Or a War Savings Stamp or a Liberty bond, if you haven't already done so.

Let's see, where are "The Sea Terrors" going to be? Oh, yes, at the Hippodrome, of course. A tabloid musical comedy, Manager Ely says, and a pipkin. This is but the headline act he promises, of a bill of exceptionally good stuff, including a big photoplay, "The Divine Sacrifice."

Which reminds me, though it seems somewhat irrelevant, that next week I may have something to tell you about the "Divine Sarah" Bernhard. Maybe she's coming soon.

Well, guess I'd better stop before the copy reader chokes me off, though I would like to add that Ted Lansing, Pantages publicity provider, says he is doing great business this season with a whole raft of good things to please its patrons.

FEATURE FILMS

Following are the new photoplays at attractions opening tomorrow for part of the next week:
COLUMBIA—Elsie Ferguson in "Rose of the World."

LIBERTY—Rita Jolivet in "Leat We Forget."

"Convict 993" is a mystery play brimful of climaxes and breathless situations. There is nothing particularly new about the play, but it is made up of those melodramatic incidents that never fail to hold attention.

Mrs. Castle is serving her prison term, she is serving sentence for crime of which she was innocent. Later she enters the social world where she endures all sorts of trials because of her former associates.

'House of Glass' Fairbanks' Wife Asks for Fair Play

Clara Kimball Young Shines as Victim of Circumstances in Play.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG is starred in a role that suits her admirably in "The House of Glass," which opened today's new bill at the Majestic theatre. Although Miss Young's talents enable her to perform with marked success practically any role, she is seen perhaps at her best when playing the part of a victim of circumstances.

In "The House of Glass" she ably portrays a woman who spends one year and a half in jail because the authorities believe she is an accomplice in a jewel robbery, then, 10 years later, appears as the wife of a railroad magnate. The play had a tremendous success on the stage and its emotional gems are not lost in the film adaptation. It leads one to believe that any sort of "backstage" result, but is smoothed out satisfactorily.

A Sunshiny comedy with a bunch of lions to keep the actors on the jump also is included on the bill.

Multnomah camp, W. O. W., Friday night held initiation with a class of six. The Liberty bond committee reported a total of $37,000 subscribed through the camp. It will probably exceed $40,000. The original quota set was $10,000.

The Women of Mooseheart Legion will give a dance at Moose temple next Tuesday night to which all members of the Moose fraternities and their friends and neighbors are invited. Good music has been provided.

Telltale Lines
WOMEN who keep their muscles solid and firm do not acquire sagging cheeks and double chins as years are added to their ages. Their figures retain youthful lines, and they escape the marred lines and cheat old ageout of some of its usual victims.

Time makes an impression on everything and everybody. The granite columns of time and cheat old ageout of some of its usual victims. Time makes an impression on everything and everybody. The granite columns of time and cheat old ageout of some of its usual victims.

It is a peculiar fact that many of the laws should keep their muscles and firm as a secret are not wise enough and sufficiently far-sighted to prevent time from leaving its stamp upon their faces. It is then that they permit their cheeks sagging and a secondary chin developing have no time for the eye. It is then that they take a serious view of the conditions that cause their annoyance and advertise their age.

Women who regularly massage their facial and neck muscles are not disposed to sagging jaws. Their cheeks are firm and regular and their necks retain the pretty lines of youth. When flabbiness puts in an appearance, massage invariably corrects an embarrassing condition. But the woman who values a good complexion and youthful face does not wait to be embarrassed. She wisely adopts precautionary measures which ward off the encroachment of age and its telltale facial lines. It is not, however, that some of the

Bed Time Tales

BY DR. WARREN G. PARTRIDGE

Jimmy Coon Sets Out to Find a House
JIMMY COON and his mate, Mrs. Jimmy, started at once to find a house. You know that Jimmy's mate was formerly Miss Carrie Coon of Shalving Lagoon, Ga. Jimmy Coon was so anxious to get Carrie Coon that he consented to have his father-in-law, his mother-in-law, and their 14 children live with them. And the whole family started at once to select a nice, new, large house for the whole family.

At last Mother Coon found a big live oak tree

And as they all went through the woods, looking for a big, new house, Jimmy's mother-in-law went in front, to pick out the proper home. You see she was older than Jimmy Coon, and had lots of experience in renting houses, and after the whole family had climbed over 50 tall trees, Jimmy Coon's father-in-law's lame back gave out completely; and he groaned: "Mother Coon, I can't stand climbing up and down any more tall trees. That porus plaster you put on my back last night, came off, and I'm worn to a frazzle. You must decide at once for a home for the whole family, or I shall faint away!"

And Mrs. Coon replied, "Now cheer up, Father Coon! You know it's late in the season; and all the desirable houses have been taken! But you brace up and follow me, for I don't care to look at more than 40 more houses, before I decide where we will live!"

And poor Father Coon put both hands on his lame back; and groaned and groaned, as he dragged himself at the tail end of the long procession. And it was awfully funny to see Jimmy Coon's mother-in-law leading the way, mile after mile, as the single file procession ambled through the woods.

And when Mother Coon climbed the tallest tree, to see the top apartments, every member of the big family wanted to poke his or her head into every bedroom, to see just how many rooms there were.

And poor Father Coon, with his lame back, thought he must climb every single tree, too, and look at the size of the pantry and dining room, for Father Coon had a wonderfully good appetite.

At last Mother Coon found a big live oak tree; and after thoroughly examining the location and view, she said in pride, "Now I've decided that we'll live here, with my dear son Jimmy Coon, and my dear daughter, Carrie! You see there is a nice big spring of cool water in the front yard—just the place to get our drinking water, wash our clothes, and wash our food, and take our daily bath."

And all the family nodded their heads, and agreed that the location suited them exactly.

"Come What May They Will Not Break Through"

The present struggle on the Western front is known to the German people as "The Kaiser's Battle," according to the Washington Herald, and for this reason the higher powers realize that "it would hardly do to allow the Kaiser's name to be associated with a colossal military failure—as it would be if the present struggle were allowed to rest where it now stands." And so German legions fight desperately on in the hope of winning a decision. That their hopes are futile is the firm conviction of the Allied armies as evidenced by Premier Clemenceau's assertion that, "come what may, they will not break through," and the assurance of General Foch that "most glorious hopes are permissible." To these assurances is added the statement of Lloyd George that "the French and British are buoyed with the knowledge that the great Republic of the West will neglect no effort which can hasten its troops and its ships to Europe."

Read in THE LITERARY DIGEST this week—April 13th issue—a sweeping review of the great struggle raging on the Western front, showing it from every angle.
