FLYERS CLING TO PLANE 80 HOURS BEFORE RESCUED 2209 Planes Made

Escape of Ensign E. A. Stone, U. S. N., R. F., and Ensign Moore, R. N. A. S., Is Narrow.

Spent at Sea by Pair Without airplane post service. Food or Drink.

Washington, May 18.-(I. N. S.)- Loyal Order of Moose, Louis A. Eaton, After having clung to the Inder side of secretary of the organization, was under a seaplane pontoon for 80 hours, without food or drink, Ensign E. A. Stone, London, after having spent five weeks nounced today Stone was on a scouting trip with Ensign Eric Moore of the royal naval air service when their plane collapsed and fell into the English channel. The two men clung to the pon-toon for more than three days before they were finally rescued by the crew of an English trawler.

Stone and Moore left their station in a British seaplane to go on convoy patrol duty. When two hours out they saw what they thought was a periscope, and leaving the convoyed ship, started in pursuit and lost their course. The engine of the plane "dropped dead," and they were forced to land on the surface of a rough sea.

Threw Clock at Pigeon "We had no kite or radio aerial to call for assistance," said Stone, describing his experience, "so we released our two carrier pigeons, carrying a message telling of our plight. The first pigeon flew straight off and reached home, but the other lit on our machine and would not budge until Moore threw our navigation clock at him, which probably upset him so that he failed us. "Heavy seas smashed our tail planes

"Heavy seas smashed our tail planes which kept settling. I saw that they were pulling the machine down by the rear and turning her over, we tore the tail fabrics to lessen the impact of the waves. It was not any use to stop. Finally we capsized, climbing up the nose and 'over the top' to the under side of the proteons. of the pontoons.

"Our emergency rations had been in the observer's seat at the back but we had been kept so busy trying to repair ing over that we did not remember this

Four Days Without Food

When I crawled aft for food, Moore saw that I was only helping the machine to capsize. He yelled to me to come back and I did just in time to save myself from being carried down with the tail and drowned. From now on, for the tail and drowned. From low on, the tail and drowned. From low on, the tail and drowned. From low on, the trawler of the trawler, we were continually soaked and lashed by seas, and with nothing to eat or drink. We had nothing to and so to keep from being washed overboard, we got upon the about one another's bodies for the whole time. We suffered from thirst. We turned on our stomachs and lapped up the moisture from rain, but the

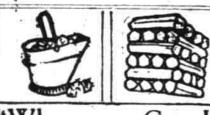

"Our limbs grew numb. From time to time the wreckage from torpedoed ships would pass. Once two full biscuit tins came close enough to swim for, but by then, in our weakened state, we knew that we would drown if we tried to get them. We did haul in a third tin, but it was filled with tobacco. Many Hopes Are Dashed

"Every day we saw convoys in the distance and waved our handkerchiefs. We had no signal lights to use at night. Our watches stopped and we lost all track of time. Once we spied a masthead light and shouted. The ship headed straight for us until within 100 yards, turned away.

couldn't sight us. But she passed above us and flew two miles beyond and came back on her course.
"Our spirits fell. We had been afraid of two things-being picked up and interned, or being captured by an enemy submarine. Now we even hoped that anything would get us to end it all. Trawler Saved Weakened Pair

"We sighted a trawler about 6 o'clock Tuesday evening. We waved at her for half an hour. We were too weak to stand up and signal. The trawler finally threw life preservers at the end of a line. I yelled that we were too weak.

She finally lowered a boat and lifted us aboard. Then we collapsed." Moore lost six toes from gangrene Stone's feet turned black, but decay did not set in. Every machine from the seaplane base had searched continuously for the missing aviators after the pigeon had homed. All patrols and destroyers in the area joined in the search
