bank. The Germans had captured hill No. 204 and the sweep of their machine gun fire isolated Bissell and his men. The group was in a precarious position, being isolated from recrossing the river by the fire of the American batteries.

Bissell signaled to the American artillery to cease firing and he and his men crossed the bridge, which was later blown up. Bissell has been cited for the French war cross.

Complete details of the part the Americans played in stemming the attempted German rush across the Marne were received today. The Yankees were rushed to the battle front during the night and found themselves in cantonments at the edge of Chateau-Thierry at 3:30 in the morning. In the afternoon heavy enemy forces attempted to complete their occupation of Chateau-Thierry. The enemy succeeded in forcing a breach, but the French quickly threw in their infantry, at the same time calling on the American machine gunners for assistance.

French General Reports The following statement was later made to headquarters of one of our organizations by a French officer: "Americans immediately reinforced our entire defense, especially at the ends of the (Marne) bridge. Their courage and ability as marksmen evoked the admiration of all. Crushed by our fire, the enemy hesitated and, as the result, we counter attacked, supported by American machine guns. The enemy was thrown back beyond the edges of the town. Chateau-Thierry remains entirely in our hands."

On the following night the Boches, taking advantage of the darkness, stole towards the large bridge spanning the Marne, having penetrated through the western suburbs along the bank of the Marne. They used smoke bombs to mask their movements and the mark made it difficult for the machine gunners to man their pieces. At the same time German artillery laid down a terrific bombardment on the town, the buildings crumbling into ruins. Shrapnel was bursting everywhere. Despite the cannonade American machine gunners on the southern bank poured a steady stream of lead across the river, which is barely 50 yards wide at this point. As the Germans emerged from their trucks for the attack, they were slaughtered in heaps. At the same time this fire covered the movement of the French to the southern bank of the Marne.

German Cry for Mercy. In the midst of this action an American officer, with two machine guns crossed to the northern bank and took up a position near the famous statue of Fontaine, writer of the fables. There they held their posts, protecting the French retreat.

The French having retired, the Germans then rushed out upon the bridge. Suddenly there was a tremendous explosion, which destroyed the center of the bridge, sending high into the air. The few Germans who had already gotten to the southern side of the bridge ran for the bank, with lifted hands, crying for mercy.

The fate of their comrades halted the rest of the Germans. Meanwhile our machine gunners continued to spurt bullets across the Marne, until the Germans abandoned their efforts to force a passage.

Naturally, the Americans suffered some losses, under the violent bombardment, but they were not out of proportion to the great service rendered, nor the bloody losses they inflicted upon the Germans.

French Pay Tribute to Americans. A French officer, in a report to American headquarters, said: "The courage of the Americans is beyond all praise. Our infantry, accustomed to acts of bravery, were struck by the wonderful morale and extraordinary coolness of our allies in the face of fire. Their watchfulness never failed them. They will be relieved at the same time as the French troops at the side of whom they fought. The French, knowing their just pride, feared that any other course would humiliate these valiant troops. The episode of Chateau-Thierry will remain one of the beautiful deeds of this war. It is a pleasure for all of us to know what our valiant allies have shared with us there. Our bonds of affection and confidence will be strengthened by the same pride we share in common."

Our machine gunners continue to occupy the positions from which they repulsed the enemy, firing continually into the northern part of Chateau-Thierry, across the Marne, and assisting the artillery in making the German positions absolutely untenable.

Among the Americans who distinguished themselves in the fighting was another Pittsburg—Lieutenant Walter R. Flannery, of Forbes street. Flannery is the first American to be decorated with the Croix De Guerre in the second battle of the Marne.

Flannery volunteered to swim the Marne river Monday night to save a wounded Frenchman. The swim had been captured by the Germans but escaped. He was directed to conceal himself until darkness fell. Flannery, with a rope around his waist, swam the Marne under a hail of German bullets and brought the Frenchman safely back to his companions. The trip was highly spectacular. Flannery and his burden were protected somewhat by a barrage from American machine guns, which had been placed on our side of the river for the purpose.

Flannery was decorated today with impressive ceremonies in the presence of the correspondents as the cannon rumbled on every side. # PORTLAND GIRL IS WINNER OF SECOND PRIZE IN CONTEST

Irene Ware, W. H. S. Student, Wins Honors in Large Field of Competitors.

Irene Ware, a student of the Washington high school, has been designated as winner of the second prize in the War Savings Stamp poster contest, which was conducted a few weeks ago by the government. Not only did Miss Ware win this distinction, but the work of other Portland competitors received honorable mention, the judges declaring that the work of the Oregon school children displayed a high order of merit and general excellence.

The Oregon winner is a 15 year old girl, the daughter of E. J. Ware of 1715 East Nineteenth street. Miss Ware has been a resident of Portland since she was 4 years old and she is a product of the public schools. For the past two years she has been a student in art in the Washington high school. The selection of her design for a poster for the war is a high honor, as to her natural ability along artistic lines.

The contest in Portland was conducted by Miss Esther Weust, director of art in the schools. All of the art students in the city were invited to participate in the contest and hundreds of poster designs were finally submitted. An exhibition of the work of the students was held at the art museum a few weeks ago, and from this exhibit the best 23 entries were selected and forwarded to San Francisco, where a committee of judges, consisting of well known artists, examined the exhibits, which were forwarded from many states.

The judges at San Francisco signally honored Oregon in selecting the poster of the Washington high school girl, giving her a second prize and a diploma was awarded to a school boy in Colorado.

Miss Ware is a quiet, unassuming girl. The distinction she has received causes her to smile. She considers that there were a number of other designs which she thought were on a par with her own. Her poster is original in design and treatment and the color scheme is bold and striking. One of the 23 posters taken from the exhibit at the art museum 10 were the work of Washington high school students, this being a remarkable percentage to come from one state. There were so many others in competition.

Five More Thefts Reported to Police

Five more thefts were reported to the police Wednesday night. The Northern Pacific warehouse was broken into by a thief, who stole 80 pounds of smoked meat. Lieutenant A. L. East of East of Gorge, Wash., reported the larceny of his suitcase at the Union station while he was waiting for the train.

The following reported their homes entered and jewelry stolen: Mrs. M. L. Holmes, 588 Ramona avenue; Mrs. E. S. Frame, 481 Chapman street, and H. E. Holt of the Douglas apartments. Inspectors have been assigned to investigate each case.

Girl Lends Rings To Man Just Met; Both Now Sought

San Francisco, June 6.—(U. P.)—Arthur W. Mixon, said to be the son of a former mayor of Dallas, Texas, is sought by detectives on a charge of stealing diamond rings, said to be valued at nearly $5000, from Miss May Hopkins of San Francisco.

According to Miss Hopkins, Mixon was introduced to her at a social affair. He admired her rings, she said, and asked to wear them during the evening. Miss Hopkins declares she has not seen her rings since. One of them was found in a Los Angeles pawn shop.

Mixon was also known to A. H. Howe, an Harry Perry. He was last heard from in Salt Lake City.

That is all, according to his statement, in which he makes the following cash: "That I have carefully examined and read the return of my election expenses (amounting to $500) and receipts (amounting to $500) hereto attached, and to the best of my knowledge and belief that return is full, correct and true."

"And I further state on oath that, except as specified in this return, I have not paid any money, security or equivalent for money, nor has any money or security been paid, advanced, given or deposited by any one to or in the hands of myself or any other person for my nomination or election for the purpose of paying any expenses incurred on my behalf on account or in respect of the conduct or management of said election."

DO YOU REALIZE THE VALUE OF GLASSES?

I did not. As you remember, Monday I had made up my mind to have Dr. Duback check them up.

I was surprised at the thoroughness in his examination and the difference it made in having glasses made and ground to a prescription of his work.

He took some time and very much patience to get the examination just right, and it was a delightful surprise to be able to see properly.

He also called my attention to the wrinkles and frowns as a direct result of not wearing glasses, and that those who wore improperly fitted glasses came under the same condition. I was also surprised to learn so many other ailments were the indirect results of not wearing glasses, such as general nervousness, etc.

The glasses he made me have the small dark shell around them and give one such a dignified appearance and then they must be made in size and shape to lend appearance, not those horrid old loop-sided ones you generally see.

I have had them on three days, and already I can see my frowns and wrinkles are almost a thing of the past, and then to be free of those headaches and be able to see 50 per cent better— isn't it worth the price?

My advice now is for everyone to at least have your eyes checked over to see if there be any trouble with your eyes.

You will find them at 120 Broadway, and he waits on you in person and no students; and then his offices are so cozy and up-to-date.

AND the entire proceeds will be donated to the British Dependent Islands—a fund for the support of wives and children of British subjects who formerly lived in Oregon, but now are fighting in the trenches. They get it now from the Canadian government and the father. Can they live on that? They cannot. Buy your wife a soda and help them out.

This is an invitation to all the ladies, girls, men and young men in the city. There will be no charge for admission.

Largest Masonic Class Gets Degrees

Scottish Rite Masons Holding Largest Initiations in History, 246 Candidates Taking Entire 23 Degrees.

The reunion of the Scottish Rite Masons being held in Portland this week has the largest class in its history. Many soldiers in various branches in Portland and Vancouver have taken some of the Scottish Rite degrees and are now completing the entire 23. As these come in with their credentials it swells the class to the largest ever held. The indications are that there will be over 250.

The largest class heretofore was 80 at a reunion several years ago. The degree work is being laboriously conducted at the Scottish Rite cathedral, Lowndale and Morrison streets, under direction of Philip S. Malcolm, sovereign grand inspector general; Louis G. Clark, venerable master of the Kadosh; and a large staff of officers. The nineteenth to thirty-first degrees are being conferred today and this evening. Tomorrow will be the concluding thirty-second degree, "master of the royal secret"; the camp of the sages, lecture by E. C. Jones, the class photo at the noon hour and a banquet in the evening.
