Notwithstanding the fact that two days' picking was available for the trade here at the opening of the week, strawberry prices held firm and sold at practically unchanged values. Sales on the East Side Farmers' markets were sllown around $2.75 @ 3 per crate, while along Front street the good fruit sold at $2.85 @ 3. This was for the so-called soft varieties, the higher price including the Improved Oregon variety.

Aside from a crate or two from here and there, practically no Clarks were available for the week's opening trade. Wilsons failed to materialize, but are expected almost any day. Magoons are in small supply and the big movement is due within a day or so.

Quality of the day's offerings of berries was rather favorable, most of the home produced fruit, being good. On the other hand, very poor quality of berries shipped in by railroads is noted and ascrifice prices were forced generally for these, with sellers finding it diffiguit prices maintained.

Corn and Oats a Shade Weaker Again

The buying continued urgent right up to the close of the session, although there were reactions of % c in the June and % c in the August from the highest levels of the Session. The July future closed unchanged to % c lower from the highest point and showed net advances of 3 % 3 % c for the day.

Outs were up 1 @ 1 % c. Samples of corn were unchanged to 5 c lower and oats were unchanged to ½ c higher. Chicago, June 10 .- (1. N. S.) -- Corn and oats opened slightly easier today on the board of trade, due partly to better weather conditions and forecast for generally fair and warmer weather. On the decline, there was buying by commission houses, with a resultant sharp upturn, with some of the early sellers going over to the buying side.

The trade in grain is now much more interested in crop conditions than in the old crop, and there continues a general lack of activity in the market for 1917 coarse grains.

E. T. Marchetti, government crop statistician for the state of Washington, reporting the total spring wheat acreage at 1.730,000, oats 310,000 acres, and barley 173,000 acres. He says that fall wheat, although retarded considerably by cool weather during May, has acquired a fairly favorable growth and has headed in many areas of the state. The crop generally is in a favorable condition, excepting in occasional fields throughout the Palestance. condition, excepting in occasional fields through-out the Palouse country and in small acreages planted in the Big Bend counties, where germina-tion was spotted on account of an unusually dry fall, and the wheat is more weedy than usual. Many fields normally sown to fall wheat in the Palouse, Walla Walla and adjacent counties were sown to spring wheat this year on account of an abnormally dry unfavorable fall for wheat seed-ing, and the Big Bend counties were practically sown to spring wheat, especially in the Yakims and Kittitas valleys, Occasional fields throughout the Big Bend counties germinated spottedly on account of an unusually dry period immediately succeeding planting, and the seeding of interior succeeding planting, and the seeding of interior quality wheat which had been injured by hot winds last year, and many fields of spring wheat throughout the Palouse counties, especially late sown, germinated spottedly, and rains are required immediately to insure a normal stand in total wheat are the largest ever planted in this state. The condition of spring wheat has been adversely affected by a backward May, permitting considerable weed growth, and heavy wir the month have dried out the soil materially Although local areas throughout Columbia and Garfield counties indicate increases in barley creage, these large barley producing counties as whole planted less acreage to barley than a year ago. Considerable areas of abandoned wheat acreage which were rotted and frozen out were sown to barley last year in these large barley producing counties, whereas the desire to comply with the government's request to seed all available acreage to wheat, and the early lavorable spring for wheat seeding this year has resulted in a decrease of the unusually large barley acreage sown last year in this locality. Walla Walla, Asotin and Whitman counties have increased barley acreages this year, sown principally on land plowed in the late fell and cardy in the late fell in the late fall and early winter, and usually summer fallowed, which did not interfere with the seeding of wheat acreage. The barley acreage for the state as a whole has been increased slightly. the state as a whole has been increased. The condition of barley has been unfavor fected by lack of favorable growing weather. acreage of oats has been increased in the large oat producing section of Skagit county on account of floods during the winter, which drowned out pasture and hay, which land has been reseeded to cats. Smaller cat producing sections in the countles west of the Cascades increased acreages of oats considerably, in their desire to produce al cluding areas in Stevens county, there is a ten-dency to decrease oat acreages. The decrease of oat acreage in this section was stimulated by the favorable early spring for wheat seeding, whereas the adversely late spring of last year compelled the | Clearings seeding of oats on account of the inability to plant wheat. The growth of oats has been re-tarded by unfavorable growing weather, and rain is necessary to insure favorable results. The condition of hay is unfavorable on account of cool weather, which retarded growth and encouraged cheat growth and aphides injury in alfaifa. Pastures have been injured by lack of rains and unfa-vorable growing weather. All crops are generally tures have been injured by lack or issue yorable growing weather. All crops are generally in need of imminent rains in practically alf non-irrigated counties east of the Cascades.

POTATOES ARE HERE WITH QUALITY GOOD

Initial 1918 Offerings Are From The North Portland Run Is Liberal in All Excellent Crop Condition Generally Shown in District.

First offerings of new crop Oregon potatoes were shown on the street during the day, supplies coming from The Dalles. The stock showed rather favorable quality and the sizes were quite fair; in fact, were almost as good in this respect as the California offerings.
Price of new California stock is holding Price of new California stock is holding practically, unchanged for the day, but the trend of the market here and in the south is somewhat weaker and further reductions are expected at almost any time.

Movement of new crop Oregons is expected to become general, but in a small way, within a very short time. The crop in most districts shows a rather excellent condition and the sizes are likely to be up to the usual Oregon standards, a condition shown last season.

Some movement of old potatoes continues, but it is principally to the process factories. Shipments to outside points have entirely ceased and it is not believed that any more business will be shown during the remainder of the season.
