Salmon Fry Placed In Oswego Lake

Directed by Dr. E. C. McFarland, prominent angler, two carloads of tiny salmon were planted in Oswego lake on Wednesday by the state fish and game commission. The fishing season on the lake opens Saturday and six inch fish may be caught.

Wednesday's planting included nearly 170,000 fish, five months old, and ranging in size from an inch and a half to three inches. Anglers declare that the salmon will attain a maximum growth of about 20 inches because of the conditions of their life locked within fresh water.

The maximum price at which farmers may sell cattle for slaughter in Switzerland has been fixed at 23 cents per pound on the farm. Maximum prices for meats have also been established.

"Wot are you a doin?" he demanded.

"Oi'm washin' me shirt," was the sullen reply.

"'Ow dare you!" roared the sergeant. "'Ow dare you wash your shirt in the water we 'ave to sleep in!"

RECENTLY the magazine established by Benjamin Franklin carried a character sketch story of President Wilson in which reference was made to the president's habit of using the word "Okeh," in place of the more popular form of "O. K." The story is to the effect that "Okeh" is a Choctaw Indian word meaning "all right."

Now comes and deposes R. L. McLish of McAlester, Okla., with Indian blood in his veins, a student of Choctaw, who declares there is no such word as "Okeh" in the Choctaw jargon.

And there you are.

AMONG the popular vaudeville folk who will go across very soon are Will M. Cressy and Mrs. Cressy (Blanche Dayne), who sail this month to act for the A. E. F. Sophie Tucker and her jazz band go over in July on a similar mission. All have been seen in Portland this season.

MARIAN HARRIS, the syncopated songstress, is to be married in Chicago soon. The lucky chap in the case is the son of a wealthy Texas lumberman. Miss Harris has cancelled her vaudeville contracts for the remainder of the season. Marian Harris' real name is Harrison. She is a Chicago girl and a descendant of Benjamin Harrison, a president of the United States.

HERE is a criticism that might well set the standard for comprehensiveness and brevity. It was written by the late Frank Girard a few days after Gus Williams, whom he was managing, had tried a new comedy: "Williams produced his play Tuesday night and—burned the manuscript Wednesday morning."

Bed Time Tales

Jimmy Coon's Second Lesson in Flying

NOW all the little Wood Folk crowded around to see Jimmy Coon take a second lesson in flying from Batty. Batty wanted Jimmy to take several more lessons before trying to fly. But Jimmy was stubborn and "chesty," as the boys say, and thought he knew it all. "Oh, humph, I know I can fly like that. I see just how you do it exactly. It's just as easy as walking; and my Mother taught me how to walk in two lessons; and everybody says I'm a very graceful walker."

And Quilly Porcupine laughed and grunted. "Yes, you walk just like a fat old goose. You don't walk Jimmy, you waddle." And everybody laughed loudly at Jimmy Coon. And Batty warned Jimmy, saying: "Now you must be very careful, Jimmy, you must first start flying from this stump, then if you fall, you'll not get hurt."

"Hurt, nothing," blurted out Jimmy Coon. "I'll start from a tall tree just as you do. Now come on, I'll climb to the top of that tall Beech tree; and you fly up and meet me at the top of the tree, to see me start." And Jimmy Coon scooted up that tree in a jiffy; and Batty flew up and met Jimmy on a top branch.

And Batty gave Jimmy some more advice, saying: "Now Jimmy you must use your will power to make your skin stretch out just like mine. You must will to have the skin stretch out between your toes. But you must by all means use all your will power to make your skin stretch out along your sides, between your fore legs and hind legs, just like this."

And it was wonderful to see Batty, on that limb in the top of that Beech tree, unfold his skin, like a huge fan; and he spread out his skin like a big kite. And Batty explained: "Jimmy, way back in the beginning of my family, I don't think that Bats could fly. I think the first members of my family walked on their four feet as you do.

"But my race have lots of will-power. And they decided that they would fly; and so all began to stretch their skin out like wings. And I tell you, you must have lots and lots of will power to make a success in flying, just as in everything else."

And Jimmy Coon looked very thoughtful while Batty gave this lecture on his ancestors; and Jimmy said: "Oh, I understand it all now, I can fly if I have lots of will. So I'm sure I can fly; for my mother says I'm the most willful child she ever had, and that I'm as stubborn as a mule. So I'm sure I have the will power to stretch out my skin as you do, like an immense fan; so here goes!"

"Now Jimmy you must use your willpower to make your skin stretch out just like mine.

And all the Wood Folk gasped aloud as Jimmy Coon launched out of the top of that Beech tree to fly like B. Ballington Bat 3rd.

Tomorrow: Jimmy Coon Flies at Last.

DO MOTHERS ERR?

When we hear of so many school girls and girls in stores and offices who are often totally unfit to perform their daily duties because of some derangement peculiar to their sex, might this not have been prevented by the mother who, perhaps through neglect or carelessness, failed to get for that daughter the one great root and herb remedy for such ailments, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? This old fashioned medicine is said to have alleviated more suffering of womankind than any other remedy known to medicine. (Adv.)

William Russell at Columbia Theatre

Athletic Star Takes Lead in Thrilling Story Involving Fight for Necklace.

"HEARTS or Diamonds," which started today at the Columbia theatre, is a swiftly moving dramatic photoplay with William Russell, athletic actor, in the leading role. A news weekly shows many interesting events.

In "Hearts or Diamonds," Lawrence Hanrahan, wealthy young New York diamond broker, attracted by a wonderful diamond necklace worn by a beautiful girl in a Broadway restaurant, bribes the waiter for information and scrapes an acquaintance with the girl and her elderly guardian by driving off thugs, who apparently are trying to rob them.

"Colonel" Paul Gascoyne makes himself known as the inventor of a system of making diamonds by the retort plan for less than half the cost of genuine stones. He poses as the guardian and relative of beautiful Adrienne Gascoyne, who lives with him in the mysterious house, in which the diamond retorts he boasts of are watched over by a supposedly deaf mute scientist.

The whole combination proves to be a carefully laid game of international crooks to get possession of the Hanrahan diamond ollection, one of the most valuable in the world. The shrewdness and bravery of the young broker prove potent to outwit the crooks, but before he gets back his diamonds and discovers that pretty Adrienne, whom he has feared was a thief, is really a victim of the gang, young Mr. Hanrahan experiences some of the hardest fights of his adventurous career.

FRATERNAL NOTES

The city this week is full of visitors from the Masonic lodges and chapters of the Eastern Star. Several hundred are in attendance and the hospitality extended by the local organizations, as such, and by friends and relatives to the delegates is cordial and fully up to the fraternal spirit Portland has always displayed on such occasions. The prevailing decorations for the grand lodge of Masons Wednesday was red, with Portland's red roses in profusion. On Thursday it is white and on Friday blue flowers of all kinds will be brought in. Corinthian chapter, O. E. S., has charge of the decorations at the noon day banquets given to the officers and delegates of the grand lodge.

J. McCrea of Prescott, Or., and an active organizer in the Loggers' Loyal legion, visited Rose City camp Wednesday night to meet his neighbors of the Modern Woodmen of America. He joined the order at Fulliterton, Ill., where he still holds his membership, in 1885, and holds his receipt for the payment of the third assessment levied by that association. It had a few hundred members then and has 1,200,000 now. Neighbor McCrea made a fraternal speech to the members.

This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz

(Toilet Tips)

The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain and unless the growth is extremely stubborn, a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment, be sure your druggist sells you delatone.—Adv.
